Pelletier dims B.C.'s TV-10 hopes

OTTAWA (CP) — Communications Minister Gerard Pelletier said Thursday the federal cabinet is not likely to go along with the B.C. government's request that a very high frequency (VHF) channel be set aside for educational television in southwestern B.C.

"One must realize that this request doesn't square with the long-established government policy that educational television should go on UHF and that VHF stations are kept for general broadcasting," Pelletier said.

He said any exceptions to the policy have been transitional and the Canadian Radio-Television Commission is authorized only to give ultra high frequency (UHF) stations for provincial use.

Pelletier said he expected the cabinet decision on Channel 10, the last remaining VHF channel in the area, in two or three weeks. Ron Fraser, assistant to CBC president Lauent Picard, said Thursday that negotiations to purchase a $500,000 strip of land on Blanshard between Hillside and Kings owned by the city of Victoria are dependant upon the CRTC awarding the government network Channel 10.

Fraser said the CBC plans for Victoria included both radio and television stations but the exact details of the project, to cost about $6 million, have not been decided.

He said the CBC's application to the CRTC, expected to be made in mid-February, will include plans for more than 10 hours of Victoria-produced programming for local, Vancouver Island and national consumption.

Meanwhile in Victoria, B.C. Communications Minister Robert Strachan said Pelletier's statement on the provincial request for Channel 10 tends to "make it more difficult for the province to develop a more adequate educational TV system."

If the CRTC does not award the channel to the CBC, Fraser said, a channel on a UHF broadcast band could be a possibility but that band lacks the strength to serve all of Vancouver Island.

He said Ontario met with additional expense when it went into UHF educational TV rather than the VHF system envisaged by B.C.

Strachan said he believed B.C. will be able to present a "very strong case" with the federal authorities on its submission for Channel 10.

Tax changes hit Channel 12

Time likely out, Digest may stay

Colonist Wire Services

OTTAWA — Tax amendments announced Thursday by State Secretary Hugh Faulkner will force Time magazine and Reader's Digest to close down operations here or become Canadian periodicals within a year.

Faulkner told the House of Commons the Income Tax Act will be amended to remove a special provision which permits Time and Reader's Digest, alone among foreign magazines, to share with Canadian publications a tax deductibility provision on advertising.

With the amendment, Time and Reader's Digest will be stripped of a special tax provision which allows advertisers to deduct the cost from their income tax.

Time indicated it would quit, the Digest is pushing "Canadianization" of its operations and Maclean's expressed its intention to fill the weekly newsmagazine gap.

Faulkner also told the Commons the Tax Act will be amended so sponsors can no longer deduct from income tax the cost of advertising in U.S. border stations, such as Bellingham's KVOS, which beam their broadcasts to Canada.

He estimated $20 million in advertising revenue goes to such U.S. stations each year.

KVOS said the tax changes put it in "a very awkward position" but it planned to stay in business.

Time and Reader's Digest have both maintained their Canadian editions could not compete and would have to be withdrawn if the special tax privileges were taken away.

Speaking outside the Commons, Faulkner admitted Time might close its Canadian operations but added "they have a year, until Jan. 1, 1976, to make decisions on that issue."

Meanwhile, a spokesman for Maclean-Hunter Ltd. said Maclean's magazine, now a monthly, will become a weekly newsmagazine to replace Time if it ceases publication in Canada.

Maclean's editor Peter Newman praised the amendments to the Income Tax Act as "a shot in the arm" for Canadian publishing.

CNR cancels, blames labor

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian National Railways said Thursday night that transcontinental service has been cancelled "until further notice" because of walkouts by locomotive engineers.

"Trains en route will be terminated at Winnipeg westbound and at Edmonton eastbound and passengers will be bused or flown to their destinations at our expense," said Mike Matthews, a CNR public relations officer.

Sudden oil drop security threat to U.S.—Simon

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Treasury Secretary William Simon told Congress that any sudden interruption of more than one million barrels a day in the United States oil supply would "clearly threaten to impair our national security."

Simon, in a Jan. 14 memorandum to Congress made public Thursday, said that "a recurrence of the 2.4-million barrel-a-day reduction which occurred during the 1973 OPEC embargo would have a prompt substantial impact on our economic well-being and, considering the close relation between this nation's economic welfare and our national security, would clearly threaten to impair our national security."

In an interview earlier this month, State Secretary Henry Kissinger said — and President Ford subsequently confirmed — that any oil-related action which threatened to "strangle" the United States might result in the use of force against foreign oil producers.

Simon added that "in the event of a worldwide political or military crisis, it is not improbable that a more complete interruption of the flow of imported petroleum would occur." "In that event, the total U.S. production of about 11 million barrels a day might well be insufficient to supply adequately a wartime economy," he said.

British plan referendum on market

LONDON (Reuter) — The British government announced Thursday its intention to hold a referendum by the end of June on continued membership in the European Common Market.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson told the House of Commons the Labor cabinet will make a clear recommendation after new membership terms have been negotiated.

Cabinet ministers then will be allowed to argue openly in favor or against staying in the common market.

It will be the first referendum ever held in all parts of Britain.

Hostage holder charged

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Donald Wayne Cline, a 22-year-old escaped convict, was charged Thursday with armed robbery following a bizarre sequence of events in which he held police at bay and four young children hostage in their home near here.

Police said other charges are pending against Cline, who was arrested at a London residence early Thursday after a zig-zagging police chase interspersed with gunfire through a wide area of southwestern Ontario.

The armed robbery charge was laid in Woodstock, Ont., where Cline is being held without bail until he appears in court today.

The drama started Tuesday afternoon when provincial police, alerted that four men had held up a food store in nearby Thamesford, set out on a search of area homes where the robbers might have taken refuge.

Arriving at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Field, two officers were confronted by a gunman who disarmed them but did not detain them. Police said three other armed men also had burst into the home but left before they arrived.

The remaining gunman allowed Mrs. Field to leave the farmhouse but kept four of her young children inside while he bargained with police for $10,000 in ransom and a getaway car.

IRA offers to renew Ulster, U.K. truce

BELFAST (UPI) — The outlawed Irish Republican Army has decided to renew its ceasefire in Britain and Northern Ireland, a source said Thursday.

The disclosure came hours after a bomb believed set by the IRA shattered the lobby and restaurant of the 12-story Europa Hotel, the city's largest and a local landmark. No one was hurt.

Meanwhile, a suspected IRA bomb badly damaged a north London pumping station Thursday night in the first bombing incident in Britain in a month.

Scotland Yard said four persons, two of them men working in the station, were taken to a hospital suffering from shock.

The explosion blew out the door and windows and smashed a hole in the roof of the two-story building and broke water pipes inside. Police sealed off a side road because of flooding.

The ruling army council of the outlawed guerrilla organization reached its ceasefire decision Wednesday night, the source said, and will issue orders within the next 48 hours to its members to stop all violence.

A formal announcement was not expected until early next week.

There was no confirmation from Dublin, where the seven-man council has been in secret session all week, but IRA sources there said a meeting Wednesday between British officials and representatives of Sinn Fein, the IRA's political wing, was a hopeful sign.

The IRA's provisional wing declared an 11-day break in all "military" activities in Northern Ireland and Britain Dec. 22 and then extended the truce to Jan. 16.

But it refused to prolong the ceasefire a second time and accused the British and Irish governments of failing to cooperate in the drive to end the strife that has claimed 1,147 lives here in the past 5½ years.

A British Army spokesman said the suspected victim of an IRA assassination found Wednesday beside a stolen car on the Newry-Dundalk road, 38 miles south of Belfast, turned out to be a hooded dummy packed with 100 pounds of explosives.

NDP race not for me —Barrett

COQUITLAM (CP) — Premier Barrett said Thursday he is not a candidate for the New Democratic Party's national leadership.

He said at a news conference he is "personally regretful" the NDP's acting federal leader, Ed Broadbent, has declined to seek the leadership at a party convention to be held this summer.

Barrett called Broadbent a "fine parliamentarian," adding that he understands Broadbent's decision not to run.

In comment on the statement by Vancouver-Burrard NDP MLA Rosemary Brown that she has been asked by a number of supporters to run for the national leadership, Barrett said, "If Ms. Brown were to run she would certainly be a favorite daughter from B.C."

Trudeau aide expects 'help' cry for Olympics

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday that Quebec has not requested additional federal aid for the 1976 Montreal Olympics, but there were other indications such a request is expected. (See also Page 12).

"They'd be damn fools if they didn't make a request," said one ministerial aide. "If you've got something going that's going to benefit all Canadians, you'd be a fool not to."

Trudeau's remark in the Commons came about the same time as Victor Goldbloom, Quebec municipal minister, said in Quebec City Ottawa must reconsider its refusal to grant special assistance to the Games.

A spokesman for Trudeau said Goldbloom's remark seemed to be a personal opinion. If Quebec wanted to request more aid, "they'll send us a letter."

Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa said Wednesday it is almost certain the special $1 million lottery will be extended in Quebec province to help cover the deficit.

● Western grievances within Confederation are real, and western discontent is obvious. But could such things lead to Western separatism? Colonist reporter Bill Lever, following numerous interviews in B.C. and Alberta, has examined the issue.

Is it a Sasquatch or a real threat?

First of five parts

By Bill Lever, Colonist reporter

Western Canada might not have any martyrs willing to die on the barricades for the cause of separatism, but it does have more and more people getting more and more fed up with being a colonial hinterland of the industrial east.

And continuing a tradition of dissatisfaction that began back further than Riel rebellions, westerners of varied political stripes continue to speak of the ultimate possibility of seceding from Canada.

How seriously is such talk to be taken? Is there really the possibility of a strong movement for western independence?

As one westerner, an old-time Edmonton newspaperman, puts it: "Western separatism is like that Sasquatch of yours in B.C. It's big and hairy and threatening, and from time to time people say they see it. But does it really exist?"

The same question was being asked in Quebec about 15 years ago, a fact undoubtedly on the mind of Prime Minister Trudeau last summer when he stated that western Canada alienation had become a more serious problem for national unity than French Canada has ever been.

Whether he cares enough to do anything about it is another question. Meanwhile the old western economic grievances such as tariffs and freight rates — plus a few new ones like resource taxation — continue to frustrate westerners who sense that something is badly out of whack in Canadian Confederation.

And the westerners are speaking up.

Ged Baldwin, veteran Alberta member of Parliament with a reputation for moderate views, says he sees "more potential now for dissolution of the bonds of nationhood in the western provinces" than ever before anywhere in the country.

"The situation is like that of a tinder dry forest which needs only someone to strike a match to cause a conflagration."

And in his first-ever flirt with separatism, Baldwin recently made the crucial point that "the economy of the west is viable and could sustain an independent state with ease. This is very obvious to westerners and more are openly saying so."

Dr. Hugh Horner, deputy premier of Alberta: "How far can you push people? Separa-tism might not be a serious threat now, but certainly the potential is there."

Richard Baxter, chairman of Manitoba Export Corporation: "Emotionally, I don't want to get out of Canada, but economically you have a strong argument for getting out. And if some strong leader could be found to support the idea, it could be sold because it is so right."

John Barr, Edmonton oil company official and former adviser to the Alberta government: "The west today is in a condition of latent political rebellion. The idea of separatism is no longer unthinkable, and if the federal government remains insensitive to the aspirations of the west, it will be providing more ammunition for the separatists."

Ernest Watkins, retired Calgary lawyer and author: "Western Canada is neglected and ignored . . . It could be a viable independent state, at once becoming a Pacific Rim country and turning its back on the east."

John Rudolph, president of the Independent Alberta Association: "Western Canadians are dissatisfied with our virtual colonial status within Confederation. The federal government acts to provide very substantial economic advantages to an already favored eastern Canada, primarily at the expense of the western provinces.

"We wish to have our position improved by negotiation, but because history . . . makes us skeptical . . . we are reluctantly forced to consider independence for Alberta or western Canada.

Gary Lauk, B.C. trade minister; "British Columbians might not be separatists, and they are not isolationists. But they sure as hell are alienated."

Allan McKinnon, Victoria MP: "I still think we're loyal to Canada . . . but central Canada seems so deaf to our pleading for a fair deal that they're going to have to face threats of retaliation."

The issue has made allies of the most unlikely combinations of westerners. The west's only non-NDP premier, Peter Lougheed of Alberta, is clearly united with his New Democratic counterparts on the dispute over resource taxation and on the basic grievance of favoritism for the east at the expense of the western resource economy.

And in Ottawa recently at a finance ministers' conference, Premier Barrett was even quoting the Colonist's right-wing columnist Gorde Hunter, who was writing that the time has come for the west to go it alone.

That column, incidentally, led to the discovery of an apparently large body of separatist thought among Greater Victoria residents — within days it its publication, Hunter received letters and phone calls from 179 readers, all but three expressing support for the drastic action he advocated.

Most westerners don't need to be told what the fuss is all about. The west was, after all, settled by the eastern provinces, for the benefit of the eastern provinces. It's a classic example of what political scientists call the metropolis-hinterland relationship, and the outnumbered residents of the west have a lengthy catalogue of grievances:

On the prairies, the traditional problem has been wheat, and many farmers have gone broke on some of the richest lands in the world. Farmers everywhere have their complaints, but who can blame the prairie grain growers when the Trudeau government's position has been that farmers who can't meet international competition should simply get out of business?

"There's hardly one bloody industry in Canada that could stand up to that rule," Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney has said. "If you were to apply that principle to, say, the textile industry, the first thing you would do would be to close every textile plant in the country."

The Canadian tariff system, economists have estimated, costs each family in the country about $700 a year. That is the difference between a typical range of products here and the U.S., and doesn't even take into account products from the Orient. From the western viewpoint, that is part of the price we pay to protect the manufacturing industries located almost exclusively in the east.

The resource and agriculture industries, the basis of the western economy, receive no such protection. On the contrary, the western products — petroleum, minerals, foodstuffs — stand naked to the blast of world competition and in some cases must be sold even below world prices to residents of the east.

The petroleum industry is of vital importance to the west, particularly Alberta, yet as long as eastern Canada could get slightly cheaper oil by importing it from Venezuela or the Middle East, the federal government refused to open this market to western Canada oil.

With the arrival of the so-called energy crisis came another series of federal demands on western purse-strings. From the oil industry's viewpoint, the export tax, the national one-price system and the price freeze all amount to an enormous subsidy of the east.

The latest confrontation, which Premier Lougheed has called the biggest ripoff in the history of Confederation, has the federal government taking away the provinces' right to collect royalties from resource industries. The federal government, of course, maintains that the resources should be taxed to benefit all Canadians — but to many westerners this latest move is just another example of the "colonial" west being penalized by the populous east.

● Among the most irksome examples of federal partiality toward the east is the oft-discussed issue of discriminatory freight rates. Despite promises by the Trudeau government to end the inequities, the only change to date has been the recent increase of the rates.

Westerners pay the freight on whatever they bring in or ship out of the region; not only does this place an extra burden on the consumer, it serves to inhibit the development of western secondary industry.

The list of grievanees can be expanded indefinitely. Because of its population — which translates into political clout — the east has remained overwhelming dominant in virtually all phases of Canadian life. The banks are controlled in the east, the communications-entertainment industry remains centralized in Ontario, the civil service and parliament itself are firmly in the grip of the two large eastern provinces.

Western separatism, such as it is, is so far a negative sentiment, a reaction against colonialism and economic discrimination. Westerners are fond of saying they're Canadians first and residents of their province second — but this statement is more often than not the prelude to a discourse on the inequalities of Confederation. Even those westerners regarded as the most extreme separatists shy away from calling themselves that. Without exception, they view the dissolution of Canada as a last resort, a very distasteful act of desperation.

But the threat is here, and unless more attention is soon given to the west's unique problems and perspective, that threat will become an increasingly serious challenge to ehe survival of a united Canada.

CLEANING OUT THE DRAWER . . .

I must confess a recent column of mine ran away with top honors in the mistakes-of-the-year contest, when no less than 13 spelling mistakes showed up. Now I am not the world's best speller, but I can at least handle words like, mother, thrift, Eaton's, etc. — which just happened to be a few that ended up badly mangled. The only charitable way to look at it is to suggest an inordinate number of gremlins infiltrated the typesetting machine that particular day. And I must clear up any misunderstanding as a result of yet another typo that found its way into this Wednesday's column. It came out in the paper — ". . . the proliferation of socialist-style governments in Western Canada — different, but so far, nothing to 'substitute' any bogey fears of any of the 'isms' so widely forecast."

It should have read, ". . . nothing to substantiate any bogey fears of any of the 'isms' so widely forecast."

It seems that the old spelling problems can crop up in places other than newspapers. A drive-in restaurant was doing some public service advertising for a local high school event. The sign read, to be held in Oak Bay "Jim." Then there is a local drug store with a sign advertising "perscriptions." We're all guilty. . .

MAYBE you missed the story — I didn't. Said that a survey by the Canadian Federation of Independent Business showed that a majority of its members favor giving cash-paying customers a discount.

They polled about 4,500 independent businessmen and it came out 68.4 per cent in favor, 26.5 per cent against and 5.1 per cent sitting on the fence. It pointed out that many of the major credit cards, Chargex and Master Charge, for instance, require participating merchants to pay between 2 and 5 per cent of the purchase price as a handling charge. The contracts with the merchants forbid them to offer discounts for cash sales.

But not so long ago, in The United States, the Consumers' Union won an out-of-court settlement that forced American Express to allow cash discounts, and the decision whether to offer the discounts is now left to the individual merchant. A giant step forward.

Federation president John Bulloch says supporters of the discount proposal in Canada have argued that cash customers are subsidizing those who buy on credit. They just don't argue this, they know it to be damned well true and Chargex and Master Charge can't deny the allegation. Hopefully this discount for cash move will gain new followers every day . . .

AT HAND an acceptance by Premier David Barrett to appear at this year's Sportsmen's Dinner March 10 at The Empress. Will mark the first time a premier of this province will appear at the big event . . .

WASHINGTON Governor Dan Evans doesn't want oil tankers plying the waters of Juan de Fuca Strait. Premier Barrett doesn't want them. Liberal leader David Anderson, the original fighter against the tankers, obviously still doesn't want them. Nobody seems to want them in those waters so when will the senior governments of both Canada and the United States comply with the expressed wishes and remove the fear by banning the tankers? I'm afraid, after a couple of serious mishaps . . .

MY DAY wouldn't be complete without at least one item on ICBC. Last year a lady found that she had been charged $18 more for her insurance coverage than she had been the previous year (for the same coverage) by an independent firm.

She requested and received a rebate. Now she has received her new insurance form for 1975 and finds she is once again back up to the $18 figure. One difference, however. This year she will not be able to claim any rebate. In other words, they'll get you sooner or later . . .

MANY phone calls to this department asking where copies of the petition asking for the return of capital punishment, can be had. Sorry, I do not have the address of the lady in Vancouver, who is spearheading the drive, however, there is an alternative.

John Reynolds, PC member for Burnaby-Richmond-Delta, has been handling queries on the petition and a letter to him at the Parliament Buildings in Ottawa will bring a reply to a petition. The aim is to get one million signatures and then present them to the government. That would be a pretty good expression of discontent with the present permissive approach to murder one, but I'm still not sure it would be enough to sway the abolitionists who hold the upper hand in cabinet. I still think a massive protest by the police departments throughout Canada would be the most telling approach . . .

Time likely out

"We are undertaking to move toward the publishing of a weekly news magazine for Canadians as soon as practicable,," he said. "The transformation will be done in stages. It will not be a new magazine appearing overnight."

Stephen LaRue, president of Time Canada Ltd., said Thursday the move "would, in effect, cause us to cease publishing in Canada."

The Canadian edition of Reader's Digest, and its French-language counterpart Selections, have already begun selling shares on the Canadian market. Faulkner said it is "very possible" this process would continue until the magazine became eligible for the status of a Canadian publication.

Canadian magazine are defined by tax law as being at least 75-per-cent Canadian-owned and significantly different in content from a U.S. associate.

Ottawa has "put us in a very awkward position," vice-president David Mintz of Bellingham TV station KVOS said Thursday of the second blow the Channel 12 station has received this week.

Mintz said the federal decision would force Channel 12 to cut ad rates back by as much as 50 per cent "so our advertising is competitive."

He said that would "hurt the little advertisers" and indicated it could cause a cutback of the Channel 12 staff in Vancouver, which ranges from 60 to 100, depending upon business flow.

"We have been incorporated in Canada since 1955 and we have been taxed in Canada since then on any business we do in Canada and we have reinvested our profits in Canada."

Mintz said Channel 12 could not compete with CBC and CTV on Canadian content but went into film production heavily through the subsidiary Canawest Film Productions Ltd. of Vancouver.

"We have employed more talent, cameramen, technicians, animators, than any English-language station outside of Toronto or Montreal."

Broadcast sources said the tax-deduction reversal had been expected for some time and had been the subject of many briefs to Ottawa by KVOS and other border stations which do a total of about $20 million worth of Canadian business annually.

What must hurt KVOS the most, said one source, is that Ottawa's announcement came less than a week after an Ontario appeal court ruling on a key cable-TV issue said signals of U.S. TV stations were public property once they got into the air, and the stations had no right of ownership.

That ruling was part of a judgment upholding the right of the Canadian Radio-TV Commission to order deletion of commercials on U.S. stations, whether paid for by Canadian or U.S. advertisers.

Faulkner said he knew there had been talks on "Canadianization" between Time magazine and Canadian publishers but declined to offer any details because "this is private."

Faulkner said also "the objectives of the amendment are not anti-American, not at all, but they are pro-Canadian. There are many Canadians who are preoccupied by the American influence . . . it is not a bad influence, but it is a foreign one."

He said the amendment would end the diversion of Canadian advertising money to foreign publications. "I am confident the enterprise and skill of the Canadian magazine industry will seize this opportunity. It is my hope and expectation that this decision of the government will result in the creation of a Canadian newsmagazine," he said.

In 1973, Time and Reader's Digest accumulated 14.2 per cent of the advertising revenue of all Canadian periodicals. Time circulation was 557,713, largest of any newsmagazine in the country, and Reader's Digest sold 1,330,678 copies.

Time magazine, which print an occasional Canadian cover and adds five or six pages of Canadian content at the start of an otherwise-standard American edition, made some $16.2 million in Canadian advertising revenue in 1974.

Faulkner, who received the support of opposition parties, said "in taking these steps we in the government are really not so much concerned with certain of the nation's industries as we are deeply committed to the nation's integrity."

Time's LaRue said that "we believe the result of the proposed amendment would be against the wishes of our more than 500,000 Canadian subscribers and newsstand buyers and numerous Canadian advertisers.

It also would be detrimental rather than supportive, to the Canadian magazine industry, he said.

For the last several months, LaRue said, Time Canada has been negotiating the sale of 75 per cent of the ownership of the company to Canadian interests.

"It is our hope the government will allow the company to be Canadian-owned and to continue to publish Time Canada."

The Digest spokesman, Canadian vice-president Ralph Hancox, said his magazine is not a news publication. He speculated the proposed legislation would be amended to permit the Digest's Canadian advertisers to continue deducting their fees from income tax.

Edmonton publisher claims proof

CIA spies in Canada

TORONTO (CP) — Edmonton publisher Mel Hurtig said Wednesday that at least 50 spies from the Central Intelligence Agency of the United States have worked in Canada with the full knowledge and co-operation of the RCMP.

Hurtig, founder of the Committee for an Independent Canada, told the local committee chapter that the CIA also has field officers working as attaches and consul-generals in Toronto, Calgary and Vancouver.

He said a Canadian security organization — the police and security planning and analysis group — knows about the operations and they "open their files" to the CIA.

Hurtig said Col. Robert Bourne, assistant deputy minister in charge of the security group which is under the federal solicitor-general's department, "regularly makes his secret files available to the CIA."

He said in an interview later that his information about the RCMP, the CIA and Col. Bourne would be given to Solicitor-General Warren Allmand.

He produced a typewritten list which he said contained names of all CIA agents "working under the guise of legal or cultural affairs at U.S. consulates in Canada."

Hurtig refused to reveal the names, which he said were given to him Wednesday by a Montreal newspaper, saying the paper planned to print the list next Thursday.

Although Hurtig would not reveal the source of his information, he said it came from a friend with a high-level contact inside the police and security group.

He said Prime Minister Trudeau misled the public when he declared three years ago that there were no CIA agents in Canada.

"Anyone who believes that the CIA would not infiltrate a country like Canada where the U.S. has enormous assets, is very naive," the publisher said.

He said the remedy to the infiltration is for the RCMP "to do its job."

Canada's police and security planning and analysis group was set up three years ago to receive and evaluate information from the RCMP, the armed forces and external affairs.

In an interview last year, Col. Bourne denied that it was involved in spying or counter-espionage.

Mincome level at $235 for Alberta's seniors

EDMONTON (CP) — An increase in the minimum income of Alberta's elderly and a 50-per-cent rise in the senior citizen rent rebate were outlined Thursday in the Progressive Consedrvative government's throne speech as part of a commitment to ensuring a "life of independence and dignity" for those over 65.

The speech, read at the opening of the Alberta legislature by Lieutenant-Governor Ralph Steinhauer, promised the elderly a minimum income of $235 a month and an annual rent rebate of $150.

The last Mincome increase in B.C. was at year's end, bringing the payments to $234.13 per month. B.C.'s annual renter grant for senior citizens is $800.

The speech also said the Progressive Conservative government would set up a senior citizen's community service program through the health and social development department.

Energy issues received scant coverage in the speech, which only said progress reports on the Alberta petroleum exploration plan and a review of Alberta's energy reserves will be presented this spring.

Four new provincial parks will be established, including two on the eastern slope of the Rockies. Land-use recommendations for the area have been made to the cabinet by the Environment Conservation Authority.

New housing policies will be introduced during the 1975 session by the municipal affairs minister, and the amount of money committed by the Alberta Housing Corp. for direct lending programs and senior citizen housing will be increased "significantly" over last year's $136 million.

The government proposes to encourage a healthy publishing industry in the province with a $2.5-million revolving-loan fund and assistance grants to publishers and resident Alberta authors.

The development of major recreational and cultural facilities would be assisted through volunteers and cost-sharing programs.

Death tools spawn U.S. probe

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Displaying a catalogue of assassination tools, two Republican senators Thursday introduced a measure to create a house-senate committee to watch over the CIA, FBI and agencies.

Senators Howard Baker of Tennessee and Lowell Weicker of Connecticut, members of the old Senate Watergate Committee, offered a resolution that would create a 14-member panel of house and senate members.

It presumably would implement recommendations that will be made by a newly created special senate committee which will investigate the CIA and issue a report by Sept. 1.

The joint committee as proposed in the Baker-Weicker measure also would be charged with overseeing the secret service, the defense intelligence agency and the national security agency.

In introducing the measure, Weicker displayed a catalogue of booby-trapped cigarette cases, telephone receivers and flashlights offered for sale to the U.S. government for use abroad and which could be timed to explode in the user's hands.

The "assassination catalogue," as Weicker called it, was prepared by a laboratory in suburban Arlington, Va., and presented to an unidentified government agency for its inspection.

Sad lack of concern

CANADIAN AND AMERICAN officials currently meeting in Washington to devise safeguards against oil tanker spills in Juan de Fuca Strait and effective methods of mop-up or dispersal when they occur — as they inevitably will — are reported to have agreed upon a voluntary traffic control system to reduce the risk of accident.

It is alarming for those of us who live in areas which would be damaged, perhaps irreparably, by any tanker mishap that the security planners cannot see the necessity for compulsory control of all sea traffic on the pattern at international airports, and other sensible safeguards.

Equally disturbing is the uncertainty about the ultimate points of oil delivery. Governor Dan Evans is urging the Washington state legislature to introduce laws prohibiting location of new transfer facilities farther east than Port Angeles.

At the same time he would like to see regulations banning entry of super-tankers into waters beyond Port Angeles — to Cherry Point, for example. But that presupposes construction of superport facilities somewhere between Dungeness and Cape Flattery.

Whatever happened to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' search for west coast oil harbors, "ports which can be deepened to handle huge new tankers and sites where pipelines can be run from off-shore refineries perhaps miles at sea . . ."?

Neah Bay and Clallam Bay, across the strait from Vancouver Island's Port San Juan, might be less dangerous terminal sites than ports farther east. The Columbia River mouth seems to offer an even more acceptable alternative.

Convenience and economy, in the circumstances, should give way to consideration of the environment.

This becomes more urgent with the decision of the United States that double bottoms shall not be a requirement in supertankers entering Juan de Fuca.

Canada should lodge the strongest protest against this reckless compliance.

Noel Mostert, a world-recognized authority on the subject, believes that in order to guard against disaster Canada, the United States, Japan and the maritime nations of Europe should agree upon safety standards for supertankers: double bottoms, twin screws, stronger steering and keel systems and adequate auxiliary boilers — without which, in the event of accident, they are helpless, without lights, radar, sonar or any other mechanical aid to navigation.

Mainly because of inadequate equipment, Mostert points out, there were no fewer than 326 tanker accidents in the first three months of 1974.

There is no reason to suppose this rate will alter favorably as long as shipbuilders and operators are not required to observe the strictest security regulations.

The same conformity is necessary in traffic control as in construction. The plan must be mandatory and inflexible.

Canada, as far as the Juan de Fuca Strait is concerned, can do little more than advise and accept Washington's decision. But we should be doing less than our duty if we did not urge in the strongest terms the strictest measures for our own protection.

Tax-dodge wrappings

WITH RESUMPTION of Parliament after the Christmas-New Year break it might have been thought there would be mention, at least, of the state of Canadian affairs. It would have been too much to expect introduction of new measures to combat inflation and unemployment, both of which piled up more troubles during the MPs' absence. But some assurance to the people that there is concern in Ottawa over deteriorating conditions would have been welcome.

This is not to say that the main feature of reopening day shouldn't have been on the agenda. On the contrary, the prime minister's swimming pool is of considerable importance. It is not the piffling thing that at first it might appear to be.

Much is revealed about the government side of the Commons in its shouting down of NDP house leader Stanley Knowles when he attempted to introduce a motion that Parliament's privileges and elections committee investigate "all aspects" of the gift of the $200,000 pool by a group of Torontonians.

Mr. Knowles, along with Conservative MP Thomas Cossitt who got the same shout-down when he called for a halt in construction of the pool at the prime minister's official residence, suspect the gift has a wrapping of hanky-pank.

As it turns out in an investigation by Southam News Services in Toronto and reported after the day's sitting, there is a tax-dodging angle to the gift-giving.

Dr. W. H. Fader, a Toronto physician described as the spokesman for 25 private citizens supplying the $200,000 for the pool, is quoted as saying the plan is to deduct their shares from their taxable incomes.

This means a reduction in their taxes which boils down to subsidization of the pool, indirectly, by all Canadian taxpayers.

A Revenue Canada spokesman confirms that when individuals make a gift to the Crown or one of its agencies, and the Crown issues a receipt, the donors may claim full income tax deductions.

This was "looked into" by the pool donors before coming up with the $200,000, Dr. Fader is said to have admitted.

Whether Revenue Canada has agreed to allow the pool payments being used for tax deductions is not known.

An investigation of this and as Stanley Knowles says, "all aspects," of the pool, is a must. The public has a right to know the full story with it paying part of the "shot."

No deal in Vienna

By ROBERT CAMERON from Vienna

With the Ford-Brezhnev talks in Vladivostock having scored a major propaganda (but minor substantive) success in slowing the arms race, the spotlight will now be on Vienna. This is where the Mutual Force Reduction (MFR) talks for Central Europe, between NATO and the Warsaw Pact Organization (WPO), are in progress.

As with many diplomatic negotiations, each side first tabled a totally unrealistic plan to achieve the stated aim. In some instances this may be strategically sound. So too, may be the tactic of holding to some untenable positions as long as possible. But for my money, it's high time NATO made its publicized terms of settlement for MFR more reasonable to it's own constituency.

One of the NATO aims — that of an early, token reduction of only U.S. and Russian forces as a confidence building measure for the smaller European nations (with fewer bargaining chips) is unexceptionable. But the proposal of limiting all reductions to ground forces is almost treating WPO negotiators like morons — in view of the tactical nuclear airpower NATO has on call to counter-balance opposing strength in infantry and tanks.

Having said the above, I hasten to add that in private discussions, NATO bureaucrats are well aware of certain concessions they will have to make, to get force reductions in Central Europe. For instance, the Russians are never going to agree to anything that could be twisted to allow Western Germany (FDR) a more prominent role in NATO. So NATO's proposed cut, of U.S. and Russian troops as a starter, will certainly have to be tied to a firmly scheduled second slice with FDR forces featuring prominently in the package.

There will be much haggling over the offset for FDR reductions since NATO is still far from sympathetic to a one-for-one exchange with any one, or a mix of GDR, Polish and Czechoslovakia troops. But whatever officials may think of these three Russian satellites we have to remember one or two things. Unlike NATO, the WPO is a super-national organization. It is tightly controlled by Russians from Moscow, and with little need for consultation on major decisions.

It has enviable standardization of equipment, logistics support, and training — a lack of which, the top military man in NATO has recently denounced as a stark and inexcuseable deficiency after 26 years of defence building effort. All of which makes NATO's "apples and oranges" talk on this one-for-one question somewhat unrealistic.

In any event, the real knockdown, dragout sessions in Vienna will certainly come over the U.S. Forward Base System (FBS) for tactical nuclear aircraft. And on this question, NATO will have to make substantial concessions if it wants any quid pro quo.

The crux of the FBS for Russia is that it involves U.S. aircraft with sufficient range to strike many of her industrial centres. Russia of course has a huge complex of aircraft and medium range missiles that could similarly devastate Western Europe. Nevertheless, Russian missiles and aircraft targeted on NATO Europe are perceived by Russians as far different from U.S. aircraft, sheltering under the NATO umbrella, and being able to drop nuclear weapons on the Russian homeland. Russia considers the latter as part of the U.S.-Russian confrontation and strategic balance.

This Russian viewpoint seems quite legitimate since, hypothetically, a limited-aim, military operation in Europe could conceiveably escalate to a nuclear exchange involving Russian territory, with American troops, but no U.S. real estate, being affected. (Sounds crazy, I know. But the on-going nuclear debate is full of such action-reaction extrapolations we have to live with as background to developing a practical strategy).

Having been identified as a U.S.-Russian problem of major dimensions for so long, the FBS has naturally been the subject of much intellectual debate. Some persuasive authors claim that by excluding aircraft that carry nuclear weapons, and with the range to strike Russia, from NATO's inventory we would not in any way impair the deterrent credibility of our defence. On the contrary, they argue that deterrence should be enhanced because the U.S. president could then make a decision to use some small tactical "nukes" in defence of Western Europe, with less risk of escalation than many people perceive in current arrangements.

I was first impressed with a specific de-coupling proposal as far back as 1963. It was advanced by a brilliant USAF planner to counter the clearly eroding faith of Europeans that the U.S. would ever employ any nuclear weapon on their behalf, even though the obligation to do so was firmly embodied in NATO documents. His idea was to establish a special tactical nuclear NATO force, limited in size, capability and range (short of Russian homeland), and with all details well advertised — particularly to the potential enemy. The de-coupling concept, then as now, is to improve NATO credibility by clearly separating the tactical potential of a few, small, nuclear weapons from their inter-continental counterparts, and thus minimize the chances of strategic warfare, while reducing the imbalance of conventional forces favoring the WPO.

Any suggestion of nuclear de-coupling from SAC is of course anathema to Europeans. This is so even though both France and England have independent nuclear forces — of much greater importance than given credit, precisely because of independence. Also, there's the argument of some Europeans and Americans that de-coupling would relegate highly expensive F-111s and F-4s to "carrying garbage." But this quip is now nonsense for the introduction of "smart" bombs has enormously increased the potential of conventional airpower.

A re-casting of NATO's nuclear airpower will certainly result in the removal of many surplus weapons. It should also encourage up-dating the remainder to make them appropriate for military targets specifically, and thus more capable of containing escalation.

Therefore, since the sort of nuclear de-coupling we've discussed is notably consistent with NATO's defensive mission, and would still leave plenty of American forces in Europe as hostage to U.S. participation in any European war, it makes good sense and is well worth prompt negotiation.

Ireland's awesome diplomatic challenge

By ANDREW STEPHEN from Dublin

When Ireland's foreign minister, Dr. Garret Fitzgerald, flew to Brussels to take the chair for the first time at an EEC Council of Ministers meeting last week, he went tourist class on an Aer Lingus scheduled flight. His French predecessor, M. Jean Sauvagnargues, invariably had a French government jet to whisk him privately around the European capitals and beyond.

Flights are not the only problem which the hard-pressed Irish foreign minister now faces. At the beginning of the year, Ireland assumed the presidency of the European community for six months, taking its alphabetical turn between France and Italy.

Until July, Dr. Fitzgerald will act as spokesman for the Nine, voicing their collective views to world dealers such as Dr. Kissinger. Ireland will also have to act as host for various conferences and EEC jamborees, including two summits. More to the point, however, it will have to find chairmen for at least 190 different EEC committees, ranging from obscure taxation sub-committees to any epic conferences such as last year's World Food Conference.

All of which has presented Ireland, the weakest member of the EEC (and, after Luxembourg the smallest in terms of population) with a problem. With an EEC contingent of diplomatic staff of only 26 and only 200 diplomats throughout the world, many of the prospective chairmen who are sent to Brussels will have to take charge of two or more committees.

If energy can make up for size, Ireland will triumph. Dr. Fitzgerald, who will be 49 next month, has become something of a national phenomenon since he entered Parliament here only six years ago. As the son of an Ulster Protestant mother and a southern Catholic father—who was one of the republic's early ministers of external affairs—he now sees his task to heal Europe's political wounds as well as Ireland's.

He has a flamboyant career, graduating in Dublin with a degree in history and modern languages before being called to the bar; he then forsook academia and spent 12 years as schedules and research manager for Aer Lingus. Sixteen years later he decided to become a lecturer in political economics at University College, Dublin, and at various times has been an author and Irish correspondent of the British Broadcasting Corporation, The Economist and Financial Times.

Dr. Fitzgerald's television performances helped his party to win the general election in 1973, and one of his favorite phrases: "As I said in another program recently," has become a catchword.

Notwithstanding Dr. Fitzgerald's skills as an imparter of enthusiasm, can Ireland cope with the EEC mandarins, given their penchant for plush, impersonalized efficiency? Sceptics point to Denmark's six-month tenure of office in 1973, when because of its size there were various disasters: a formal request from the Soviet Union to have talks with the EEC, for example, was simply lost and forgotten somewhere in the Danish bureaucracy.

What is worrying many is Ireland's ability to cope with the EEC on its own soil. Senior civil servants have grim premonitions of M. Giscard d'Estaing or Herr Helmut Schmidt trying to cope with the vagaries of the Irish telephone system, or less flippantly, of an IRA dream assassination scheme.

Interpreters are being recruited from Brussels, but since political consultation meetings are held in French, for two years Irish telephonists and telex operators, as well as diplomats, have been taking crash courses in French.

Even so, meetings held in Dublin will place a terrific strain on Ireland's entire foreign affairs staff of 670—compared, for instance, with France's 9,000.

Despite the inevitable poking of fun at the Irish, Dr. Fitzgerald faces some daunting problems. first, there are the ramifications, for Ireland as well as for Europe of Britain's renegotiation and possible withdrawal from the EEC. Secondly, there is the whole doubt fraught aspect of EEC relations with the United States; and thirdly the need to start a Euro-Arab dialogue over fuel. Undoubtedly Dr. Fitzgerald will need all the political acumen and enthusiasm at his disposal to succeed in what is the most important international role the Irish Republic has undertaken in its 53-year history.

For how long the free society?

By LUBOR J. ZINK from Ottawa

The blueprints of rapid economic development after "true liberation" the Marxists unfold in the Third World countries is so alluring that it's hard to resist. So, considering the dire straits most of the developing nations are in and their association of colonialism with the Western World, it is rather remarkable that they haven't all swallowed the bait without a second look.

They may, however, drift into the beckoning arms of Moscow or Peking if the Western World slides down the inflation chute into recession and our whole system starts disintegrating in the resulting anarchy and chaos.

It could be, as the prophets of doom maintain, that the process of decomposition is already too advanced to be checked after last year's electoral refusal in Britain and Canada to accept a few minor inconveniences in order to curb inflation and absorb the structural changes caused by the OPEC quadrupling of oil price.

I don't think it's quite as bad. Britain and Canada are not the whole Western World and the refusal of their electorates to face reality was, in any case, far from overwhelming. So it does not necessarily follow that the two elections heralded a devastating avalanche of voters' refusals in all the democracies to do what elementary responsibilities of freedom demand.

The flight from reality and self-discipline in the two countries last year did, however, indicate deeply-rooted weaknesses in our system which should be looked at and, if possible, corrected before they become fatal.

The basic weakness of our system, I submit, is its perversion or outright betrayal of its original concept of freedom and human dignity for all.

While proclaiming universality of freedom and equality, the French and American revolutions actually ushered in limited political and economic liberty. What followed was a rather unsavory period of consolidation of power and privileges of the new ruling strata of enterpreneurs whose concept of economic freedom turned out to be freedom to exploit labor mercilessly in the rough early stages of industrialization.

It was in this atmosphere of the laborer's bitter taste of freedom as freedom to slave for a pittance or starve that defensive political and union socialism struck roots among industrial workers. Marx, a German-Jewish philosopher, shaped it into a doctrine of life-and-death class struggle.

Although today there is no trace left of the merciless laissez-fair early capitalism and trade unions have gained enormous power in the industrial democracies, the class war concept still permeates the thinking of many workers even if they do not subscribe to the Marxist creed. This, like the mental climate in the former colonies, is a heritage of bitter memories and lingering feelings of hatred which, while no longer rooted in fact, provide fertile soil for the bacteria of social decomposition and prod labor unions to disregard all other but their own selfish interests.

Discussions of this theme, I find, tend to be plagued by semantic confusion. So perhaps a few remarks about basic political and economic terminology may be in order at this point.

Quite frequently, no distinction, or incorrect distinction, is being made (even by politicians, economists and journalists) between socialism, communism and planned economy on the one hand and democracy, capitalism, free enterprise and freedom in all its aspects on the other.

The most common error made is the description of the Soviet system and its derivatives as communism and of the Western system as capitalism.

Both the systems that today pass under these labels have little in common with their theoretical origins and their initial practical forms. They are now advanced forms of industrial managerism of which the Western version, with virtually unlimited political and individual freedoms and extensive welfare schemes, is much closer to what socialism denotes to most people, than the regimented Soviet system of monopoly state capitalism.

By industrial managerism I mean any economic structure in which ownership of the means of production has been completely or largely divorced from their management. This is how our big corporations are being run and this is how the whole Soviet economy operates.

★ ★ ★

In both cases, the managers who are expert administrators and technicians, are highly paid employees of anonymous owners. Thus, little is left of true private enterprise in our giant industries and in the Soviet system nothing is left of the communist concept of workers' ownership and management of the means of production.

Where these two, technically and administratively increasingly similar, systems radically differ, is in their motivation, social functions and objectives.

Africa's women achieve equality

By ROBIN WRIGHT, from Nairobi, Kenya

She is an ambassador and a cab driver. She is a noted marine biologist and a paratrooper. She is an ad agency executive and a supreme court judge. Once she served the United Nations as president. And today she is a prime minister. Yet she is also considered the world's most primitive woman, for in each case "she" is African.

Long stereotyped as a black woman naked to the waist, lip plug or scars decorating her face, the African woman has begun to shatter that narrow image.

In the Arab north, the black central states, and the white-dominated south, she has emerged as a key to development during Africa's first generation of independence.

* * *

Three factors have caused the change for women in Africa:

● Polygamy has forced many women to be more independent. As Mrs. Felicia Ademola, owner of a thriving boutique in Ghana, explains, "We started off a polygamous society, and this emphasized the need for women to be financially independent of men.

"If a man has four wives and only $50 of income, obviously no one is going to get more than $12. But if you can make it $25, it helps. I think the tradition of women working to have their own income now has become sort of habit with us.

* * *

"We find that the men after the baby has come don't care very much. It's the woman who is saddled with the house and the child, and she has to go out and feed it and see that it gets an education.

"This, over the years, has inculcated in the woman this urge to go out and work, no matter what it is."

● Along with growing financial independence, women are gaining political power. They played key roles during the fight for independence.

From Algeria to Zaire they served as paratroopers, spies, and arms smugglers alongside the men.

Some gained international prominence, like Algeria's Djamila Bouhired, who was sentenced to death by the French during the Algerian conflict but escaped execution.

* * *

After independence, women again played key roles, since they gained the franchise along with the men. From the beginning, they have had a voice in forming the new indigenous governments.

Because of female involvement — both political and military — most men in power felt "women couldn't just be thrown aside," according to Mrs. Famah Josephine Joka-Bangura, an official in Sierra Leone's ministry of external affairs.

"We were already established. They never had a chance to subjugate us."

* * *

Just this month Elizabeth Domitien of the Central African Republic became Africa's first woman prime minister.

● Manpower shortages and educational systems often favor women. In an increasing number of states, females outnumber males in school, mainly because men are forced to leave at a younger age to get jobs to support a family.

A shortage of trained personnel also has opened the way for women, as in the eastern state of Somalia.

* * *

As Miss Bihi notes: "When foreign civil servants were pulled out after independence, the government needed anyone who was qualified. There was such a shortage of trained personnel that little attention was paid to (an applicant's) sex."

The growing rejection of traditional roles and values resulting from these factors can be seen mainly in the migration to the cities.

In the past 15 years, thousands of young women throughout the continent have left their villages, many never to return.

In the Ivory Coast, for example, seven times as many women as men are moving to the cities to take advantage of better opportunities.

Some join the growing student population. But many also come to work — and not always in the usual female jobs.

In many nations, the African woman holds a position of high status: as governor in Zaire, tribal chief in Sierra Leone, cabinet minister in Cameroon, or playwright in Ghana.

She is a member of the foreign ministry in Egypt and a television director in the Ivory Coast. And she is a member of parliament in at least two dozen African nations.

More often she holds lower-level, formerly male-dominated jobs: In Liberia, women drive cabs; in South Africa, one heads a labor union; and in Nigeria several are police officers.

In the Ivory Coast women pump gas, and in Somalia they dig ditches and build houses.

In every nation the African woman is most active in a commercial capacity. Ever since many of the warring clans in the sub-Saharan states used only women to do their bartering, "market mammies" have been a formidable force in economics.

* * *

"Women really have built up most of the big (local) commercial concerns in this country," says Regina Addae, head of an advertising agency in Ghana. "And now we are branching off into new fields."

Urban women have also become outspoken through a modern addition to the market role — consumer rights.

"Getting involved in campaigns against high prices and poor products is the way most Nigerian women first gain the confidence it takes to speak out generally," explained Mrs. Remi Johnson, who produces a children's TV program in Lagos.

Yet it is also economics that prevents more women from getting an education and good jobs. In several nations, the average per capita income is under $200, which often puts training and opportunities beyond reach.

Liberia's Angie Brooks, for example, had to work as scrubwoman, cook, and dishwasher to pay for the education that led her into law, government, and eventually, in 1969, to the presidency of the UN general assembly.

And South Africa's Miriam Makeba was a servant in a white home before she made it as a singer.

* * *

Not all by-products of the new female activism are positive. In Nigeria, officials estimate that 70 to 80 per cent of all smuggling is done by women. Prostitution has become a chronic problem in some of the larger cities.

And in many nations, the divorce rate is skyrocketing. As a Cameroon man at the United Nations explained, "Many men cannot yet accept a working wife. She presents a threat."

* * *

Many governments are trying to bypass some of these limitations of poverty by providing education for all children of both sexes, as exemplified by new programs in Somalia and Nigeria.

Scholarships for advanced degrees are increasingly available on an equal basis for women and men in a number of states.

Even the traditional dowry is being phased out or modernized. In 1966, the Central African Republic promised to slap a jail term and a fine of up to $200 on any family demanding a dowry.

* * *

Encouragement also has come from many non-government sources, such as the various international conferences held in Algeria, Senegal, Ethiopia, Tanzania, and Kenya to promote participation of women in public life.

And there are a growing number of national women's groups fighting for women's rights, educational opportunities, and new consumer laws. One of the oldest is Kenya's Maendeleo ya Wanawake, which recently called for a woman in parliament from every Kenyan province.

* * *

But the biggest boost may have come from Louise Crane, the Zaire-born author of Ms. Africa.

"The feminist movement has much to learn from the women of Africa," she writes. "They have been a vital part of independence movements in all the nations that have become free of colonial rule since 1950."

The contribution of Laszlo Gati to this growth has been, and is, outstanding. I think it is time that we music-lovers gave him concrete evidence of our appreciation by writing, even very briefly, to him and letting him know that he and the orchestra are enriching our lives immeasurably.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Too much ado over Knight case?

One is amazed at the number of column inches and air time that have been devoted to the removal of Dr. Stanley Knight from the office of director of research and development in the Department of Education.

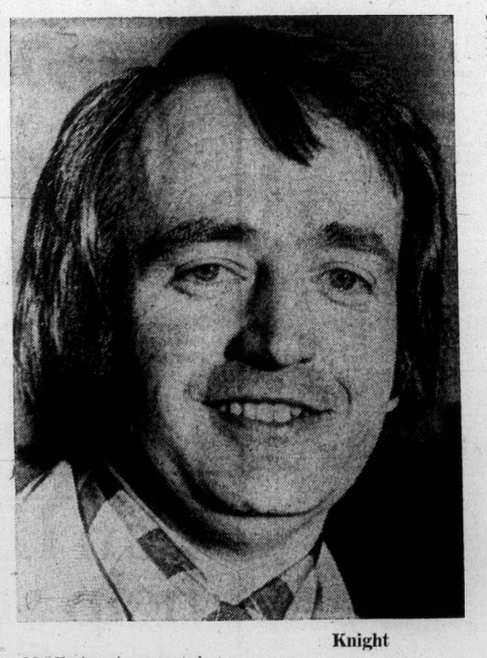
The term "fired" has been used by some who would like to inflate the matter into a full-blown political issue. There is a question, in fact, whether or not the termination of an appointment at the end of a probational period could be termed a firing.

It's interesting to note that the leaders of all opposition parties have, while admitting no knowledge of the circumstances, lost no time in publicly condemning the minister of education.

It's a little saddening, when the best interests of some half-million kids are at stake, to be forced to conclude that the possibility of a little political advantage is so much more important than careful consideration.

Right up front with the politicians is the president of the British Columbia Teachers' Federation. Perhaps that was to be expected. Mr. MacFarlan has not gained distinction for outstanding respect for authority — elected or otherwise.

He has, in fact, been instrumental in gaining for the federation, despite the deep concern of many radical and militant teachers' organization to be found anywhere.



Knight

MacFarlan is reported to have said that the minister "has yielded to the pressures of the combined forces of the conservative department officials". In that context the term "conservative" represents a value judgment.

What is conservative to Mr. MacFarlan may well be deemed less than responsible by a majority of the parents of the kids who are the pawns on what seems to be an endless, mindless game of power politics.

I don't pretend to any special knowledge of the specific issues of this case. That puts me in the same category as most other commentators.

I have not won for myself recognition as an ardent supporter of the philosophies of the current political regime in British Columbia. I have however had a long involvement in the politics of education.

I have learned to be very wary of attempts by so-called progressive educators to politicize our public school system. I have long and ardently supported the right of teachers to determine how teaching shall be done. I have been equally insistent upon the public's right to determine what shall be taught.

Determination of the basic goals for public education is in the realm of public decision. Know-how relative to the achievement of those goals is essentially within the realm of professional decision.

Before anyone jumps to conclusions about the differences which may have led to the termination of the appointment of Dr. Knight it would be interesting to ascertain the extent to which the minister and her "conservative" officials are trying to protect that precious realm of public decision.

Toronto trading

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market Thursday added another broad gain to its latest rally. Industrials rose to a five-month high in active trading.

The industrial index was up 2.62 to 173.69, highest since Aug. 21, and the third straight rise following five losing sessions.

Analysts say the market strength, evidence in all sectors, is largely a result of falling interest rates. Just before the close, Bank of Montreal announced a redustion in its prime rate to 9¾ per cent from 10½ per cent, effective Feb. 1.

Volume of 3.07 million was the highest since Jan. 10 and up from 2.24 million Wednesday. Value was $25.78 million, highest since Nov. 22, up from $18.03 the previous day.

Bank of Montreal, which announced the prime rate cut, was up ⅜ to 14¼.

Imperial Oil A traded actively and closed at $26½, up ½. Imperial announced higher 1974 earnings.

B.C. drilling rigs await decisions

VANCOUVER (CP) — Sixteen per cent of the oil-gas drilling rigs that were in British Columbia a year ago have been pulled out, a spokesman for the Canadian Association of Oil Well Drilling Contractors said Wednesday.

John Porter, manager of the Calgary-based association, said the 43 rigs in B.C. early in 1974 have decreased to 36 and, of those, 17 are idle at the seasonal peak of northeastern B.C.'s normal drilling season.

Further, Porter said, the industry had planned to sink 55 new wells in B.C. this winter —until the federal budget was brought down in mid-November.

That budget sparked a taxation squabble between the federal and provincial governments. Finance Minister John Turner said the fuel producers of B.C. would have to pay federal taxes on the basis of "fair market value" rather than prices received from such agencies as the government-owned B.C. Petroleum Corp.

Negotiations last week between Ottawa and B.C. apparently settled the dispute over the taxation sharing and the federal government's earlier intention of slapping on an export tax on B.C. gas.

Neither government has spelled out the specific details of the settlement. They have only hinted at the possibility that B.C.'s private gas producers, such as Pacific Petroleum and other firms, may end up getting some of the extra revenues the federal and provincial governments will pick up from increased export prices to be set later this year.

But the new agreement won't buy back the time lost in developing the production of new B.C. gas supplies, Porter indicated.

B.C. government officials, including Attorney-General Alex Macdonald, the minister responsible for energy policy, along with BCPC chairman James Rhodes, will meet today in Calgary with industry leaders.

It shapes up as a lively meeting, with the gas producers asking for higher wellhead returns against warnings by Macdonald and Rhodes that they want action from the producers on their current exploratory and development programs.

But, Porter said that even if a quick settlement is now reached between the producers and the B.C. government "it won't mean a wholesale restart of drilling operations."

"There's a lot of preparatory work to be done, men, gear and equipment to be assembled," Porter said, "it takes time to get this done, none of this can be done overnight."

Rights sale small

Comparatively small results from a small offering was shown in the latest competition for oil and gas rights conducted this week by the B.C. mines and petroleum resources department.

Figures released Thursday showed that a disposition of 46 parcels covering only 130,788 acres brought a return of $446,054.27. All the revenue came from lease parcels as no acceptable bids were received on four permit parcels and one drilling reservation offered.

Bonus bids on 17 of 41 lease parcels, covering 9,657 acres, were accepted for a total of $425,040.27. Another $21,014 was received in statutory fees and rents.

Highest price per acre was $147.87 paid by Wainoco Oil Ltd. and Czar Resources Ltd. for a lease located 40 miles northwest of Fort St. John.

The disposition was an extra one put forth by the department. The regular quarterly competition will be held Feb. 26 with a closing date for postings Feb. 4.

A department official explained that the extra competition was an experiment to assist companies in the utilization of their drilling rigs. Companies, he said, would be able to spread their posting and drilling activities over a more flexible period of time than is usually the case in the winter season.

Treasury Bills

OTTAWA (CP) — New 91-day treasury bills issued Thursday: $255 million at an average price of 98.462 and an average yield of 6.27 per cent. Last week: $255 million at average price of 98.362 and average yield of 6.68 per cent. 182-day: $65 million at an average price of 96.975 and average yield of 6.26 per cent. Last week: $65 million at average price of 96.801 and average yield of 6.63 per cent.

Imperial earnings increase

TORONTO (CP) — Imperial Oil Ltd. announced Thursday that its 1974 profits increased 28 per cent compared with 1973.

J. A. Armstrong, Imperial Oil chairman, said in a statement that earnings for the year ended Dec. 31 were estimated at $290 million, or $2.23 a share, compared with $228 million, or $1.76 a share, a year earlier.

NEW YORK — Exxon Corp., the world's biggest oil company and parent company of Imperial Oil of Canada, showed year-end earnings up 28.5 per cent over 1973. Exxon said Thursday that it earned $3.44 billion or $14.03 a share compared with $2.44 billion or $10.90 a share in 1973.

More banks cuts seen

The Canadian Press

A surprise move Thursday by the Bank of Montreal may well indicate another round of reductions in interest rates shortly.

The bank announced it is lowering its prime lending rate to 9¾ from 10½ per cent effective Feb. 1.

It is less than two weeks since the Bank of Montreal, together with other Canadian banks, lowered their prime rates to 10½ per cent from 11.

Their move followed a signal Jan. 13 from the Bank of Canada which lowered its lending rate on seldom-made loans to retail banks by a ½ point to 8¼ per cent.

The prime rate is that charged to a bank's most credit-worthy customers. All other commercial rates are scaled upwards from the prime.

The bank said its action reflected a national and international trend to lower interest rates.

"Short term interest rates in Canada and internationally have been declining sharply in recent weeks and the bank's action is a reflection of this trend," said a bank spokesman.

He said the base rate to small businesses, farmers and fishermen will be reduced, also effective Feb. 1, to 9½ from 10 per cent.

Interest on non-chequing savings accounts is expected to decrease Feb. 1 to 7¼ per cent from 8¾ per cent, he said.

In the United States, the prime rate has been dropping steadily since the beginning of the year and another drop by major American banks is anticipated in the next day or so.

A senior banking economist, commenting on the Bank of Montreal's move, said it is likely other Canadian banks will follow before the beginning of February.

And under pressure from the market the Bank of Canada will probably lower its lending rate, maybe as early as this weekend, he said.

With the rapid decline in rates on all types of loans, Canadian stock markets have gone on one of their best rallies in several months.

Long-term rates are falling as well. The Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. (CMHC) reduced its mortgage lending rate Thursday to 10½ per cent from 11¼ per cent for loans to house buyers under the Assisted Home Ownership Program.

The reduced rate applies to loans made by CMHC in areas not served by commercial lenders approved by the corporation — mainly insurance and trust companies.

Arco defends action

LOS ANGELES — Atlantic Richfield Co. says that its subsidiary, Atlantic Richfield Canada Ltd. (Arcan) had a legal right to withdraw from the Syncrude project and it expects to make a successful defence against damage suits.

The governing operating agreement among the parties to the Syncrude project gave Arcan the right to withdraw from the project, as it did, without monetary liability to the other participants, Atlantic Richfield said in a statement from its headquarters here.

The operating agreement, the company added, provides that in the event of such a withdrawal, the continuing participants' sole remedy is the right to obtain or cause to be sold the withdrawing party's interest.

In Calgary, Syncrude announced that it had joined Imperial Oil and Gulf Oil in suits against Atlantic Richfield. It filed a $12 million statement of claim Thursday. The other suits total $325 million.

Arco's Canadian subsidiary announced early in December that it was withdrawing from the oil sands project because of escalating costs.

Canucks back on track Scouts surprise Bruins

Vancouver Canucks snapped a lengthy losing streak Thursday but the most surprising result on an eight-game National Hockey League schedule happened in Boston.

Canucks ended a pointless run at nine games by edging the rookie Washington Capitals, 3-2, while the other expansion squad, the Kansas City Scouts, scored a 3-2 upset over the mighty Bruins at Boston Gardens.

Victory was only the 10th of the season for the Scouts, and it was the first win for former Bruin coach Bep Guidolin against his former team.

Bobby Orr got the Bruins away to a 1-0 lead before the Scouts struck for three straight goals and hung on for the win.

Randy Rota equalized for Kansas City in the first period and Ed Gilbert and Gary Croteau tallied in the middle 20 minutes.

Goalkeeper Dennis Herron stopped eight of nine shots in the final period, giving up a goal to Johnny Bucyk.

Defeat was costly for the Bruins who dropped nine points behind the surging Buffalo Sabres in the race for the Adams Division lead. Buffalo tripped the Detroit Red Wings, 5-1 in another game.

At Landover, Md., the Caps held a 2-1 lead until midway through the third period and had their losing string extended to nine games when Don Lever tipped in a Tracy Pratt shot with only 66 seconds to play.

Ab DeMarco had equalized for the Canucks earlier in the period, firing a 35-foot slapshot past goalkeeper Ron Low while Washington's Denis Dupere was serving a hooking penalty.

The hapless Caps, with only three wins and five ties in 47 starts, carried a 2-1 lead into the third period on goals by Mike Marson and Mike Bloom.

The win kept Vancouver three points up on Chicago Black Hawks in the Smythe Division race.

Chicago spotted New York Islanders the first goal of the game before firing three goals in six minutes and one second of the second period for a 3-1 victory.

Pit Martin sparked the Hawks by assisting on Phil Russell's goal then scoring the insurance marker after intercepting a pass in the New York zone.

At Buffalo, the Sabres scored three power-play goals in winning their 30th game of the season — a fifth in a row.

Rick Dudley scored the winning goal and assisted on another — the 20th and 20th assist of the season for the hard-nosed winger.

In other Thursday action, Reg Leach scored two goals to help Philadelphia Flyers to a 7-2 win over the Blues in St. Louis and New York Rangers kept pace with the defending Stanley Cup champions by trimming the Atlanta Flames, 5-2, in Madison Square Gardens.

Kings, Canadiens post big shutouts

Los Angeles Kings and Montreal Canadiens took the shutout route to victories Thursday and maintained their neck-and-neck battle for first place in the National Hockey League's Norris Division.

With all-star goalkeeper Rogatien Vachon in the net, Los Angeles scored an 8-0 win over the visiting Toronto Maple Leafs while Ken Dryden recorded his second shutout of the season in a 7-0 Montreal win over the floundering Minnesota North Stars.

The results left Los Angeles one point up on Montreal and the Kings still enjoy a game in hand.

Vachon blocked 23 straight shots in posting his fourth shutout of the season — and second against Toronto — and he reduced his goal-against average to a league-leading 1.90 for 32 games.

The shutout was the seventh of the season for the goalkeeping tandem of Vachon and Gary Edwards, a Los Angeles club record.

Juha Widing fired three goals for the Kings, who held period leads of 1-0 and 4-0. Butch Goring, Neil Komadoski and Mike Corrigan each contributed a goal and two assists in leading the Kings to their eighth win in nine starts.

At Bloomington, Dryden stopped 27 shots and Glen Sather led the attack with a pair of goals.

The loss was Minnesota's 10th in a row and it left the North Stars only four points up on the rookie Kansas City Scouts.

Pete Mahovlich and Guy Lafleur added a goal and two assists each to the victory.

Esposito, Luce chasing records

Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins and Don Luce of Buffalo Sabres are closing in on couple of National Hockey League scoring records.

Esposito, who leads the league in goals with 43 and points with 87, is six goals away from the power play record of 28 in a season, while Luce is two shy of the record of eight short-handed goals in one season.

The league leading goal-scorer for the last six seasons, Esposito set the power-play record in the 1971-72 season when his total production was 66 goals. Hi sleague-leading 22 power-play goals this season is well ahead of runner-up Danny Grant of Detroit Red Wings, who has scored 13 of his 25 with the man advantage.

Luce, who is chasing the record set by Dave Keon of Toronto Maple Leafs in 1970-71, has scored more short-handed goals killing penalties than 11 of the NHL teams, while the Sabres lead the league with 11 goals in 194 penalty-killing attempts.

Next games: Tonight — VICTORIA at Brandon; Saskatoon at Lethbridge; New Westminster at Regina, Calgary at Kamloops.

The hard-working goalkeeper posted his first-ever Western Canada Hockey League shutout in backstopping the Cats to a 6-0 win over the Clubs in a game marked by the absence of certain players, and coaches from both teams.

Earlier in the day, league president Ed Chynoweth issued a stiffly-worded statement and suspended manager-coach Pat Ginnell of Victoria and coach Murray (Muzz) McPherson of Winnipeg for three games each. He also fined Ginnell $1,000.

Chynoweth said Ginnell showed little or no control over his players from becoming involved in a huge brawl with the Clubs on Monday in Winnipeg. He said the fine was a result of a similar incident in Brandon the following night.

If the fine is not paid by 5 p.m. on Jan. 28 Chynoweth said, the Kamloops Chiefs-Victoria game scheduled for that night at Memorial Arena will be cancelled.

McPherson was suspended for lack of control over his players in the Monday fight which resulted in six game misconduct penalties.

The league also suspended Cougar-captain Kim Clackson for six games, three for starting a fight in Winnipeg and three for what Chynoweth said was an unprovoked attack on a Brandon player immediately following a Wheat King goal.

Jerry Rollins of Winnipeg was also suspended for three games for his part in the Monday fight and Eric Sanderson of Victoria was suspended indefinitely for receiving a match penalty in the Brandon game.

In addition, Darryl Sutton of Winnipeg and Lori Gloeckner of Victoria were suspended for one game because they left the bench to join in a fight.

But that wasn't all the bad news for Victoria.

Only two hours before game time, it was learned that flashy young defenceman Gordie Roberts will be lost to the team for up to six weeks with a badly-broken thumb. Roberts picked up the injury in the Monday scuffle but played a full shift in Brandon.

The loss of Roberts, Gloeckner and Clackson left Victoria with only two regular defencemen — Rick LaPointe and Tim Williams and Rick Peter, who has seen more duty at left wing this season than on the blueline.

The defensive trio turned in a standout game in helping preserve Leslie's shutout. Williams had a pair of goals while LaPointe and Peter drew an assist each.

Leslie made 36 stops, including 17 in the second period when the Clubs mounted their best attack.

Cougars finish their six-game road trip in Brandon tonight and return home to face Calgary Centennials on Saturday at Memorial Arena.

In other Thursday action, rookie Dan Bonar scored two goals to give the Wheat Kings a 2-1 victory over the visiting New Westminster Bruins, while Don Murdoch ran his league-leading goals total to 54 by scoring three times in a 6-3 Medicine Hat win over Kamloops.

Stags become Blades, move to Baltimore

From Sharks to Stags to Blades.

The World Hockey Association made it official Thursday, announcing that the Michigan Stags franchise had folded and would be replaced by Baltimore Blades for the remainder of the season.

Originally housed in Los Angeles, where as the Sharks they averaged more than 5000 fans in their first two seasons, the franchise was moved to Michigan prior to the start of the season.

But at Detroit's Cobo Arena they averaged around 2000 fans and when the management couldn't meet the December payroll, the league took over the franchise, and is still seeking private owners.

Baltimore Mayor William Shaefer whose administration had been trying to obtain a franchise for more than a year welcomed the Blades to the city Thursday saying the move "puts Baltimore in the company of other major-league cities in North American Hockey."

With the Blades moving in the Baltimore Clippers of the American Hockey League are folding, effective immediately.

Clippers owner Zanvyl Krieger said that since the beginning of the WHA three years ago the team had averaged about 4000 fans per game at the 10,000 seat Civic Centre and had sustained substantial losses.

Additional sport on Pages 12, 31

The Blades will play four road games before opening at Baltimore against Houston Aeros on Feb. 2.

In league games Thursday: Blair MacDonald scored three goals and Jacques Plante made 34 saves as the Edmonton Oilers thumped visiting Winnipeg Jets, 7-3; Indianapolis Racers scored their 10th victory of the season defeating Chicago Cougars, 4-2, at Indianapolis; Cleveland Crusaders snapped Quebec Nordiques win streak at 10 games by defeating them, 5-2, at Quebec City; San Diego Mariners whipped visiting Vancouver Blazers, 6-1.

When you keep King Fisherman Contest records for more than 20 years you should get to know where and when to expect the best fishing.

Undoubtedly Becher Bay waters emerge as the outstanding year-round salmon-producing waters. More entries have come from those waters more consistently than from any other area along the Vancouver Island shoreline.

Bates Beach, between Courtenay and Campbell River, is another area that holds a pocket of fish when no other mid-Island waters are producing salmon in any quantities.

Bates Beach holds coho, some distance off shore, and in most years too provides some fine chinook fishing during May and June, only yards from the shoreline kelp beds.

It seems that this area provides a resting place for the chinooks and it is quite often that the Bates Beach — Kitty Coleman area is providing hot fishing when other nearby areas are non-productive.

Why, and what holds those salmon in that mile-or-two-long pocket, I can't say, but our records show that it happens regularly off Bates Beach.

Now, this fishing area is being threatened by "progress."

Sea Terrace Properties Ltd., of 31 Bastion Square, Victoria, has applied to the pollution control branch for a permit to discharge up to 80,000 gallons of effluent a day into the Bates Beach waters.

Type of treatment to be applied to the effluent before discharge is oxidation ditch, clarifier, settling tank, sludge disposal, chlorination.

We know, by our records, that these waters can be numbered with the top two or three salmon-producing pockets of Vancouver Island.

Anyone who fishes Bates Beach also knows that fact.

And anyone who is concerned about what will happen to those fish when 80,000 gallons if effluent is dumped over them each day should write and let their feelings be known to the Director, Pollution Control Branch, Legislative Building, Victoria.

A public hearing at which all interested fishermen can be heard, and not just adjacent property owners, should be held before any decision is allowed on this application . . . and only your written protest can make sure a public hearing will be heard.

Apart from concern of fishermen the sewage outfall would be directly between two public parks — Seal Bay Nature Park and Kitty Coleman Park. Any malfunction in the system could result in both these public beaches being polluted.

★ ★ ★

Winter chinook fishing is good fairly well anywhere you can get on the water.

Last Saturday there were 423 boats off the Victoria waterfront—more than is usual in a summer day—and they recorded 216 chinooks, 214 jacks in the four-pounder bracket, and 100 grilse.

Oak Bay, Sooke and Saanich Inlet waters were all producing fish, but in Saanich Inlet they were generally smaller. Some 257 boats in the Inlet recorded 33 chinook, 213 jacks, 24 blues and 130 grilse.

Blues are being taken around Crofton. In Cowichan Bay and Sansum Narrows anglers are taking chinook, very deep, with Abe and Al flasher, 31½ inches of leader, and green, plankton, or black and white hootchies.

Tent, Thetis and Kuper are producing four to five pound jacks on Shrimpy, Krippled K 50-50 spoons, and Strip Teaser. Anglers are still getting chinooks off Comox wharf and John and Bev Ebert and Mike Rippingale have have been getting chinooks in the Shelter Bay water. Duncan Bay has also been producing.

Cowichan Lake is now producing those big cutthroats on Rapala plugs.

Cowichan River and Koksilah Rivers are producing a few steelhead, many with net marks on. Last report we had was of 11 illegal nets across the lower Cowichan, some guarded by Indians with guns.

Further action is awaiting direction from high level federal and provincial fisheries officials. Meanwhile few steelheads are making it up the Cowichan.

Most Island rivers are in good fishing condition, but north of Qualicum snow is making access to the better spots difficult. So far is hasn't been a good steelheading year.

Green, Ziegler steal show from Miller and Nicklaus

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Everyone came out to watch Johnny Miller and Jack Nicklaus, but it was less heralded Hubert Green and Larry Ziegler who shot six under par 66s Thursday for a share of the first-round lead in the $185,000 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am golf tournament.

Miller, who had eight straight rounds under 70 and back-to-back victories in the Phoenix and Tucson Opens in the first two weeks of the 1975 PGA tour, shot a one-under-par 71, which could have been a lot worse, and Nicklaus, making his 1975 debut, matched Miller to trail Green and Ziegler by five shots.

Green, who won more than $200,000 and who had four tour victories last year, shot his 66, a card that included seven birdies and one bogey, at Cypress Point, while Ziegler, who was 27th on the 1974 money list, got his 66 made up of six birdies and no bogeys, at tougher Spyglass Hill. Ziegler's 66 tied the course record at Spyglass, one of the nation's most difficult layouts.

Meanwhile, consistent Gene Littler shot a four under 68 at Spyglass and Ross Randall and Andy North matched it at Cypress Point, which produced the day's best scores to trail by two shots. Cesar Sanudo, who had a three-under 69 at Pebble Beach, Tom Watson, who had a 69 at Spyglass, and Jerry McGee, who had a 69 at Cypress, were another shot back.

Kermit Zarley had a 70 at Pebble Beach while there were a dozen players including Miller and Nicklaus at 71. U.S. Open Champ Hale Irwin, who has had all sorts of problems this year, shot a 77 at Spyglass.

Miller started off badly with three bogeys on the front side to make the turn at 39 and seemingly was heading toward a 75 or 76, by his own admission. But he sank a 20-foot birdie putt on the 13th, a 15-footer at 18 for his 71, which was his ninth sub-par round of the year.

"I never seemed to get going," said 1974's player-of-the-year, "but after I made that good putt on 13, I was determined the round could be saved."

In the first two tournaments of the year, Miller had three eagles and 51 birdies while winning by a combined total of 49 shots under par.

Green ran off five of his birdies on the front side while making the turn in 32 and then birdied the 10th and 11th to go seven under. His only mistake came on the 14th hole when he made a good chip but failed to get down from 20 feet.

"I'm delighted with the round," said Green. "I don't mind all the attention Miller and Nicklaus are getting. They deserve it because they are the best and if it wasn't for their play, no one would come out to see us."

Ziegler made some outstanding birdie putts in his round of 32-34. He sank a 30-footer on the first hole, had 18 footers on the third and 10th holes and a 12-footer on the 11th.

"I don't care what people say about Spyglass Hill," said Ziegler. "It's one of my favorite courses and I always seem to play well there."

Ziegler missed the cut at both Phoenix and Tucson and said it was due to poor putting.

Nicklaus took 37 putts and had three birdies and two bogeys.

"I felt like I putted pretty decently," said Nicklaus, "and this was about how I expected to play in my first competition of the year.

"I had the ball reasonably close, but I always have trouble finishing at Cypress. I made a couple of strokes that were not the best."

Nicklaus, who has won a record 14 major titles in a career that began in 1962, bogeyed the 14th hole where he two-putted from eight feet, and the 16th, where he three-putted from 30 feet.

John Mahaffey, who finished second to Miller at Tucson, shot a 76 at Pebble Beach while Jerry Heard, second to Miller at Phoenix, had a 75 at Cypress.

There were 22 players at one over par 73 and the same number at two over 74.

George Knudson of Toronto was in a group at 73. Ben Kern of London, Ont., carded a 76. They are the only Canadians in the field.

Reynolds Roadrunners aren't planning on waiting to the last minute to make the Inter-high school girls' basketball playoffs like they did last season.

The Roadrunners extended their first-place lead in "B" Division to four points Thursday by defeating Esquimalt Dockers, 44-31, in an inter-divisional game at Esquimalt.

Last year the Roadrunners, who finished with an 8-4 record, needed a victory in their final league game to make the playoffs. This season they've won five of their first six games.

Rhonda Kellar led the scoring Thursday with 16 points for Reynolds, while Robin Bartlett totalled 12 for Esquimalt.

M.V. Chesnut's Garden notes

I am always filled with admiration and envy when I run across one of those rare persons who can explain and make clear some complicated procedure in just a few well-chosen words.

Take, for instance, the story of the bachelor man-about-town who was pressed into service as a baby-sitter for his infant niece one evening, and found himself faced suddenly with an unfamiliar crisis. Frantically, he telephoned a young father of his acquaintance, demanding immediate assistance.

The father, one of those rare individuals with the gift of explanation, solved the problem with a few man-to-man words:

★ ★ ★

"First," he said, "Place the diaper in the position of a baseball diamond with you at bat. Then fold second base over home plate. Place the baby on the pitcher's mound. Finally, pin first and third to home plate!"

I wish I could explain the pruning of fruit trees as simply as that, but there are almost as many systems of pruning as there are experts.

The best I can do today is to describe one simple system for beginners, suitable for dwarf apples and pears.

Later on, you can launch out into more complicated procedures after you have acquired the feel of the job.

★ ★ ★

If your trees are to be kept small, as cordons, for example, or as espalier-trained specimens against walls or fences, there is a rule-of-thumb system quite easy to follow.

In July, all sturdy young side shoots are shortened to the fifth leaf from the bottom, not counting the few small half-formed leaves that often cluster right at the base of the shoot.

Then, any time through the winter, these same five-leafed shoots are further shortened to two buds.

★ ★ ★

This treatment is repeated year after year, but after the first winter, a little extra can be done.

Some of the shoots which were shortened the year before will have produced one or two fruit buds.

You can distinguish these quite easily as they are larger than leaf buds, and they stick out more from the stem rather than lying close against it.

Wherever this has taken place, that shoot may be trimmed back to a point immediately above the topmost fruit bud.

★ ★ ★

This will tend to prevent any more extension growth from the tip of this shoot, and will throw all the energy in this particular shoot into the production of more fruiting buds.

This, in turn, will build up into what is known as a fruiting spur.

All this time, the trees has been making extension growth from the tips of the main branches; the fruit grower calls these "leaders" in contrast to the side shoots or sub-branches which are called "laterals."

These main branch tips should also be pruned, but more lightly and in winter only.

Each year these leaders are shortened by about one-third the growth it made over the last season; that is, if the branch tip extended itself by 12 inches during the past summer, about four inches is cut away, making the cut immediately above a growth bud.

The purpose of this leader-tipping is to keep the main branches thick and stiff.

★ ★ ★

Often this tipping will cause the branch to produce more side shoots the following year, which is desireable if an apple or pear is being grown as a bush or a standard.

If it is a wall-trained tree, though, only one shoot will be needed from each shortened leader — the one just behind the pruning cut, which will become the new branch tip.

Any other side shoots are treated in the manner outlined above — pruned back to five leaves in July, and to two leaf buds in winter.

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — The big question everyone is asking is, "Can President Ford's tax cut turn the economy around?" Will the money he hopes to return to the taxpayer prime the pump of consumer spending and bring about the prosperity we all dream about?

I went out to poll several wage earners right after Ford laid out his economic message and, if my sampling is correct, 1975 could be one of our best years.

Horace Cutheiler, a bus driver who stands to receive a tax rebate of $53 was the first one interviewed.

"What do you plan to do with your tax cut?"

"I'm going to take my family to Palm Springs for the winter."

"That's marvelous," I said.

"Originally, I was going to buy gold with it, but when you get a tax cuto of with it, but when you get a tax cut of yourself."

★ ★ ★

Mrs. Myrtle Oppenheim said that she and her husband figured to get back $120. She told me her husband, a fireman, wasn't home.

"Where is he?"

"He's at the boat show. We've always wanted a yacht, but he never could afford it. But when we read about the rebate, we decided we wouldn't get the opportunity again. I told him not to buy anything that would require more than a crew of three."

Roger Montalban, a waiter, was not aware that he would get back $103 for 1974. At first he didn't believe me, but when I read him Ford's message he became excited and went up to the manager of the restaurant and said: "I qui.t"

The manager has was taken aback. "But, Roger, what are you going to do?"

"I am going to open my own French restaurant. With the tax cut, people are going to demand fine French food again and it would be stupid for me not to go into my own business at this time."

★ ★ ★

Ezra Donado, the night porter in my building, stands to gain $37, but he said the windfall would not change his lifestyle. "I might go back to Sorrento to see the old country, and I'd like to buy my parents a condominium in Fort Lauderdale, but I will continue working at my job. I assure you the money will not go to my head."

Ellie Cobey, a secretary, thought she might get back as much as $195. She refused to say what she was going to do with the money. But while we were talking she received a telephone call from Gstaad, Switzerland. I overheard the conversation.

"Tell Miss Taylor I just came into some money and I am now in a position to buy her diamond ring. I will be sending Harry Winston over to appraise it. If it's everything Mr. Burton says it is, I'm sure we can conclue the deal."

★ ★ ★

The only one I met who said he was not expecting a tax rebate was Lyndon Littlefield, who makes $300,000 a year.

"Why won't you get a refund?" I asked him.

"Because I have all my money in tax-free bonds, and I don't have to pay any taxes for 1974. I think it's very unfair of the president to give everyone in the United States tax rebates except those who don't pay taxes. After all, we're people, too."

"It was probably an oversight they'll correct in the final legislation."

"They better," he said, "because my wife and I were counting on the money to put in a new tax shelter we would like to build."

Sydney Harris

Following the November election in the United States, the New York Times devoted a long lead editorial to deploring the failure of three out of every five eligible voters to go to the polls. This 38 per cent turnout was the lowest in nearly 30 years.

Actually, as has been pointed out elsewhere, America's voter participation rate is the lowest in the world, save for three countries, Botswana, Chad, and Yemen. In some nations, about 80 per cent of the voters go to the polls.

I take issue, however, with the Times' analysis of this voter apathy. The editorial attributed it mainly to three reasons: an outmoded administrative structure, a cumbersome registration process, and the growing complexity of the ballot. There is a fourth reason the paper does not mention.

★ ★ ★

This is the rapidly increasing cynicism of the electorate, combined with the mediocrity, and worse, of the candidates. People don't vote because they feel that in most cases it won't make much difference which party hack they support. They have been disillusioned too many times.

I don't think people are so much "apathetic" as they are disgusted. They may be "throwing away" their vote by staying home, but this is perhaps the only way they can demonstrate their non-partisan rejection of third and fourth-rate candidates, who speak one way before election and act another way after it.

It was ludicrous, for instance, for Nixon to assume he had a "mandate" in 1972, when he was actually elected by only one-third of the eligible voters.

In fact, more people stayed away from the polls in 1972 than voted for either presidential candidate. This tells us something about the popularity of us something about the popularity of both Nixon and McGovern. The only ascertainable fact is that McGovern was more unpopular than Nixon.

The same was true in the Johnson-Goldwater contest of 1964, when Johnson won a crushing victory only because Goldwater frightened people as much as McGovern frightened them eight years later.

Johnson, too, foolishly imagined he had a "mandate" when all he had was a grudging preference as a lesser evil. (He turned out to be very much like the "greater evil.")

The popular canard that "all politicians are crooks" is, of course, a gross overstatement. But they are all out for themselves, more than for the people they represent; this is what sends them into politics in the first place. The voters' failure to respond is an act of realism, not apathy.

HOLLYWOOD — A couple of years ago after The Beverly Hillbillies was cancelled, Max Maer's annual income was zero dollars — and he had $1,750 a month alimony to pay.

Today he is fast becoming a millionaire — in fact, he already is one.

The reason is a movie called Macon County Line which he put together himself. So far, it has passed the $20 million gross mark and Max says it is projected for $40 million.

"I have a photostatic copy of my first royalty cheque hanging on a wall of my home. It's for $1 million-eight payable to me."

Which is better than having a Picasso hanging on the wall.

Max has just finished another movie called J. J. McCulloch which he financed completely with his own money.

When we lunched the other day at the Polo Lounge, he had just shown a rough cut of it at 8 a.m. to executives of American International.

"They laughed and cried in all the right places and when you can get a bunch of hard-boiled Jews to do that at an Irish Catholic movie at 8 am, then you are home free," says Max.

Max is the son of a Jewish father — the late heavyweight champion of the world — and an Irish mother.

Max wrote, produced, directed and stared in J. J. McCulloch but he gave the show to Forrest Tucker, his costar.

"Tuck and I do a fight scene that lasts 20 minutes on the screen."

I opined that I didn't think Tuck could go that long without a drink.

"Strange that you should mention that," said Max, "because we interrupt the fight at one point so Tuck can buy a beer from a street vendor and then continue the fight after he drinks the beer."

Baby Pignatari is liquidating his vast industrial holdings as he intends to retire from business in Brazil.

Baby still is only in his 50s and is the Howard Hughes of Brazil — except he's not quite as quiet as Howard.

He said he spent the holidays at Bora Bora in the South Pacific, flying directly from Sao Paulo, taking along his wife and a party of friends.

Cathy Hawn Martin had to have been the prettiest and most generous Santa Claus of 1974. For the second Christmas in a row, she bought husband Dean a $65,000 Stutz Blackhawk and tied it up with a big red ribbon in the driveway.

The car has a platinum exterior with the interiors done in 18-carat gold trim.

Jules Meyers, U.S. distributor for the hand-made Italian car — only 75 made for the whole world — gives an inflation note. Cathy bought Dean the same car last Christmas and it only cost $45,000.

Dean loved the new car. "The ash trays were all filled in the other one," said Dino.

Besides all the Kennedys up at Sun Valley for the holidays, the slopes were filled with other celebrities. The Rick Nelsons, Jack Cassidy with a girl friend, Dr. Jonas Salk, the Gene Hackmans and Margaux Hemingway, granddaughter of the famed author and herself a top model nowadays in New York City.

Margaux, from nearby Ketchum, grew up on the slopes at Sun Valley.

Feature race eludes four-winner jockey

ARCADIA, Calif. (UPI) — Laffit Pincay Jr. piloted four winner, his second quadruple of the Santa Anita meeting, but all-time riding champion Bill Shoemaker bested the Panamanian star in the $15,000 allowance features Thursday.

Aboard Security Aim, Shoemaker was the winning jockey in the Crimson Satan Purse. Rocket Review was two lengths back and a nose in front of 9-5 favorite Blue Eyed Davy, which had Pincay up.

Pincay, running his victory total to 38 after 22 days of the meeting, started off by taking the second race with Fairway Phyllis ($5.40), survived foul claims to win the fourth on Vokyo ($9.20) and the seventh on Mia Amore ($7.40) and took the sixth on Special Affair ($5.60).

At the same point here last year, Pincay had 29 winners.

Olympic president prepared if drastic replanning needed

LONDON (AP) — A shift of sites for next month's International Olympic Committee meeting indicates that Lord Killanin, president of the IOC, is ready to act swiftly if Montreal's 1976 Summer Olympics runs into further difficulties.

The IOC meeting, set for Tunis, has been transferred to the organization's headquarters at Lausanne, Switzerland, because of the crisis that has threatened the Games in Montreal.

"If drastic replanning of the Montreal Games is necessary I want to be able to call in the internatinal sports federations to the meeting quickly," Killanin said Thursday. "Luasanne is a better communications centre than Tunis."

The obstacles to Montreal's possession of the Games intensified when strikes delayed work on the main stadium. Costs, which were moving above the originally estimated $300 million, have now more than doubled.

"I will be meeting the Montreal organizing committee . . . very soon," Killanin said. "I want to find out exactly what economies are necessary, and what cuts can be made in the budget."

That meeting, between Killanin and Roger Rousseau, president of the organizing committee for the Olympics, was scheduled for next Tuesday. However, the Amsterdam meeting has been postponed, Rousseau said Thursday.

Rousseau said the session was cancelled because he must appear at a Quebec legislative committee meeting Tuesday. The committee is to hear a feasibility study on relocating the Autostade, the arena built for Expo '67, at the Olympic site in order to cut costs and meet construction deadlines.

Rousseau said he did not know when his meeting with Killanin would be rescheduled but "that is being arranged."

Montreal planned to meet its budget through ticket sales, television revenue and the world-wide sales of coins and stamps. There appears to be a deficit of some $150 million and the Canadian federal government has said it will not help foot the bill.

"The three keys to the situation are the main stadium, the swimming pool and the press centre," Killanin said. "They must be built. After that you can think of cutting back on other things.

"Of course, it might be possible to make do with a less grand stadium that was planned at first. These are points I must discuss with the Montreal people."

Killanin said Montreal is still the choise for the 1976 Games. The German city of Dusseldorf has offered to stage the Games, although it hasn't told the IOC this officially.

The Canadian Olympic Association sent a letter to the organizing committee, stating a Feb. 15 deadline for Montreal to decide whether or not it will stage the Games.

Killanin said the COA has the responsibility in the matter "but the Montreal people have told us all along they intend to fulfil their commitments."

Government must reconsider help

QUEBEC (CP) — The federal government must reconsider its refusal to grant special assistance for the 21st Olympics in Montreal in 1976, Victor Goldbloom, Quebec minister of municipal affairs, said Thursday.

Speaking to reporters during a break in the hearings of the national assembly's standing committee on municipal affairs, which has spent three days studying ways to cut building time and costs for the Olympics, Dr. Goldbloom said:

"The federal government will undoubtedly have to look at the situation again because Prime Minister Trudeau has adopted a negative attitude.

"The federal government will have to co-operate," he said. "Montreal will have to carry its share.

"And we, the province, will be in the middle making ends meet and making the Games possible."

Despite assurances to the contrary by Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau, the Olympic organizing committee has said the Summer Games will result in a deficit of $200 million to $300 million.

In Ottawa, Prime Minister Trudeau expressed confidence in the financing of the Montreal Olympics, and said he could not understand opposition pleas for more funds when no such requests had been received from Quebec.

Zoning to encourage clusters

Saanich planning department is preparing guidelines for a new zoning category to accommodate cluster subdivisions.

It will be a second step in the municipality's attempt to encourage the use of open space in new subdivisions.

The first step was to convince a developer to build a cluster subdivision as an experiment. The result was 29 homes just off Feltham Road, built on smaller-than-usual lots.

From the road, it looks like an ordinary subdivision, Mayor Ed Lum said. But behind the homes is more than an acre of open land, owned communally by the residtents.

Three other similar developments adjoining the first have been given preliminary approval, and Saanich hopes more than 15 acres will eventually be developed cluster-style in the area.

The experiment has uncovered several administrative problems that the planning department is trying to solve, planner Tom Loney said Thursday.

One problem is that each phase of the experiment is being handled by a different developer. Saanich's next cluster development will be encouraged in an area like Broadmead, Loney said, where a fairly large subdivision could be handled entirely by one developer.

The main problem is the open space — who owns it and who maintains it? Saanich council's policy, and Loney thinks it's a wise one, is to make sure the municipality is not saddled with responsibility for the land.

The land behind the Feltham Road subdivision is registered as a single lot, but each resident owns a share of it. Any resident who sells his home sells his share of the green space along with it.

Saanich is now considering a strata-title arrangement for clusters, to clarify responsibility for maintenance of common property.

Building large-as-usual houses on smaller-than-usual lots presents more problems. Setback regulations have to be relaxed in this kind of development, Loney said, but the board of variance is not set up to grant wholesale exemptions to an entire subdivision.

One way around that is to set up a separate zone, with its own setback requirements, for cluster housing. That's what Saanich is working on now, but it has one major disadvantage, Loney said. Rezoning would require public hearings, another delay in processing which makes the whole idea less attractive to developers.

Cluster housing offers developers some compensating advantages. They can often build a few more houses than would otherwise be possible, and servicing costs (sewers, drainage, water supply, roads) are substantially reduced. And developers in the United States have found that cluster homes are out-selling homes in traditional subdivisions, Loney added.

Vandalism rises in parks

Although vandalism in Victoria's parks increased sharply last year, it has not reached disturbing proportions, according to parks director Clifford Bate.

Vandalism in the city's parks system cost taxpayers $2,833 last year, an increase of $800 over the previous year. Bate told a meeting Thursday of the city's park committee.

Damage done by vandals in Beacon Hill Park alone totalled $1,329, more than three times the 1973 total.

Bate said although outbreaks of vandalism are regrettable, Victoria was in the fortunate position of suffering far less than most other Canadian cities.

Sidney shipyard busy despite slow economy

The first of three 65-foot patrol boats being built for the federal environment department by Philbrook's Shipyard Ltd., Sidney, is scheduled to come off the ways in about eight weeks.

Shipyard manager Ted Hopkins said the other two will follow at about 30-day intervals.

The contract for the three was $1.4 million. Two similar boats were delivered to the federal government last year under a separate contract.

"We are looking to a very good business year," Hopkins said. He forecast it will be one of full employment for the company's employees.

"We have a lot in the wind," he said, as he explained there were several contracts pending, and the yard's service department is doing a "terrific business."

Other new construction under way includes four sailboats in the 30 to 40-foot range. About the end of next month, the yard will start work on a $90,000 contract on the second stage of a 60-foot aluminum boat project. The first stage is being done at a shipyard on the Lower Mainland.

Hopkins said the largest craft the yard can handle is about a 70-footer. The company also has several differently sized sailboat moulds used in the building of glass fibre hulls.

He said the yard does about $2 million worth of business a year.

He said the shipyard has been fortunate because, when the economy seems to slow down, it has had enough work on hand to carry through until the economy picked up again.

An indication that employment at the yard will remain strong came just before Hopkins was interviewed Wednesday when a $35,000 contract was signed for a 34-foot sailboat.

Mother Cecilia loses $1.5 million lawsuit

Sisters 'lost society membership'

The B.C. Supreme Court Thursday dismissed a suit for a $1.5 million property by Mother Cecilia Mary Dodd and four sisters and declared that the five plaintiffs are no longer members of the Roman Catholic Socjety of the Love of Jesus.

Mother Cecilia and the four sisters, who operate the Good Shepherd Animal Shelter at Mill Bay, sued the society for a declaration that they are the only lawful members of the society and as such are entitled to exclusive use of St. Mary's Priory in Colwood.

Mr. Justice Harry McKay, in a 38-page judgment handed down in Vancouver, said each of the five plaintiffs had been dismissed earlier by the Society of the Love of Jesus as a religious in the Roman Catholic Church.

"One must be a religious in the Roman Catholic Church to be a member of the defendant secular society," said the judgment. "It follows that when one is properly dismissed as a religious she ceases to be a member of that secular society."

The lawsuit followed dissention in the society over the activities of Mother Cecilia, 86, in creating and operating an animal shelter as part of the work of the order.

The society countered with a supreme court claim that the five plaintiffs were no longer members of the society. Mr. Justice McKay heard the case in a month-long trial in Victoria.

The society has substantial assets including valuable land which the supreme court judge ordered the five sisters to vacate by April 30, 1975.

The judge says the church never intended to ignore the needs of the five women.

"Canon law provides that the reasonable needs of a dismissed religious are to be taken care of and the rescripts in question specifically so provide," he says.

The judgment said Mother Cecilia founded the order in Vancouver in 1922 as an Anglican institution. In 1937, all but two members of the order became converted to the Roman Catholic Church. Of the 1937 converts, only Mother Cecilia survives.

The order later moved to Victoria and acquired land and created a chapel, a residence for the sisters and a hospital. Later a senior citizens' home was established.

Eventually the building was converted to the sole use as a priory for the religious order and was called St. Mary's Priory.

"It is obvious that the Sisters of the Society of the Love of Jesus, under the direction of Mother Cecilia, had done a remarkable job in a comparatively short period of time," said Mr. Justice McKay.

He said Mother Cecilia had for some years become a law unto herself and had found it difficult to comply with the lawful orders of her superiors in the church hierarchy. He added that Mother Cecilia had attracted a remarkable degree of loyalty from the sisters under her.

She became prioress, but later another prioress was elected who informed Mother Cecilia she would have to get rid of her three dogs.

"The fat was in the fire," said the supreme court judge. "Mother Cecilia said that if her dogs had to go she would go."

Later, she went with her dogs to a three-acre property she owned in her own right. Earlier, while she was still prioress, she had set up an animal shelter on that property.

Her personal ownership of property was one of the many matters that she and the Roman Catholic Church disagreed on — the church taking the position that it was not in keeping with her vow of poverty.

Her work at the Good Shepherd Shelter has expanded over the years and it is a well-known haven for abandoned animals of all species. As zoning laws caught up with her, Mother Cecilia moved to Mill Bay.

"The work has received mixed reactions from the public and has proved to be somewhat of an embarrassment to the Roman Catholic Church as it is associated in the public's mind with the work," said the supreme court judge.

Quick action contains small spill

Small 50-gallon oil spill about noon Thursday in Esquimalt Harbor was corralled inside 1,100-foot oil-boom within 30 minutes and harbor waters were cleared by late afternoon. Spill happened during transfer of bunker fuel from Canadian Coast Guard's weathership Quadra, right, into large oil barge when a valve jammed.

Mediator files report

CUPE talks Sunday to decide on walkout

City of Victoria outside workers, now in a legal position to strike, will decide Sunday when to call a walkout that could paralyze regional municipal services and Greater Victoria schools.

Ron Davidson, an executive member of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, Local 50, said Thursday the executive will meet Sunday to discuss the timing of a strike by the 280 workers. Local 50 now can withdraw its services at any time as it has received a copy of mediator Clark Gilmour's report.

Gilmour was asked to withdraw from the dispute Wednesday and filed his report with Labor Minister William King the same day.

The Regional Bargaining Group (RGB), representing the Greater Victoria School Board, the Capital Region District, Sidney, Saanich, Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Victoria in talks with seven CUPE locals, has said it will meet any individual strike by a general lockout of all 1,783 CUPE workers in the region.

Tom Smith, a CUPE representative, said Thursday the RBG has indicated it would ask Gilmour to withdraw immediately from the other disputes if one local strikes, putting the municipalities and the school board in a legal position to lock-out all its CUPE workers.

However, Smith said he hopes that if that happens, King will use his power under the B.C. Labor Code and refuse to accept Gilmour's report, forcing both sides to continue bargaining.

There is a possibility of reaching agreements in several areas if the municipalities bargain in good faith, Smith said, but the "employers now seem more interested in locking people out."

Meanwhile, a meeting Thursday between the Capital Region District and 110 inside and outside workers was inconclusive, Dennis Young, the region's executive director, said Thursday.

Although another meeting date has not been set, Young said the two sides are no further apart, while warning that the "good relationship is likely to deteriorate" if there is a strike by city outside employees.

Mediation efforts will continue next week from four other CUPE locals; the school board and its janitors and custodians will meet at 10 a.m. today.

A prolonged strike by municipal employees would save Victoria taxpayers "millions of dollars," Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen said Thursday.

A strike would also give the population added "maturity," the mayor said in an interview.

"For a change, not everything would be done for them. They would have to rely more on their own initiative," Pollen added.

He stressed, however, these advantages weren't worth the price that would have to be paid in the form of "the disintegration of our usually excellent staff-management relationship."

"As you know, we have a very competent and good staff," Pollen said.

But if a strike does occur, he said, the city might as well look at it from the bright side.

"The money we save could easily pay for the Government Street mall," the mayor said.

School stand in 36 hours

Greater Victoria residents will know Saturday afternoon if schools will be shut down in the event of a general lockout of CUPE workers in the area.

Greater Victoria Teachers' Association and CUPE representatives will meet Saturday morning to discuss whether teachers will continue to work in the event of a lockout of regional CUPE members, including janitors, school aides and secretaries employed by the Greater Victoria School Board.

Mavis DeGirolamo, president of the teachers' association, said Thursday that a special meeting of teachers Wednesday unanimously approved a contingency plan for a lockout situation. However, she said, she could not release details until after Saturday's meeting.

She did say teachers would not perform work usually done by CUPE members and would encourage students to follow suit.

If janitors and custodians are locked out, and schools are without heat and garbage removal, the regional medical health officer should keep a close watch on health conditions in the affected schools, she said, taking "appropriate measures" where necessary.

Municipalities ponder:

How to do impossible?

As Greater Victoria edges closer to a possible strike by municipal employees, civic governments are preparing themselves for an almost-impossible task.

How to keep the wheels of municipal government's complicated machinery going in the event of a strike? That's the question on the minds of a handful of non-union senior staff members and elected officials.

At Victoria city hall, there were already grim signs Thursday morning indicating a strike may be unavoidable.

The entire assessment department, transferred last October from the city to the provincial government's Assessment Authority, was preparing to evacuate the building.

Chief assessor Jack Ozard and his staff of 12 aren't involved in the dispute between several locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees and seven municipal government agencies.

Ozard said his department is ready to move to the assessment authority's headquarters at 1537 Hillside to avoid being caught in a strike.

Government business

If the expected strike occurs, government business will be severely affected in Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay, Esquimalt, the Capital Region District, Sidney and the Greater Victoria school district.

In Victoria, the work normally carried out by more than 500 employees would fall on 35 senior personnel.

Every facet of city business would be affected.

The streets would no longer be cleaned and municipal garbage pick-up would cease.

The city's recreation facilities, such as the Crystal Pool and Royal Athletic Park would be closed.

Johnson Street Bridge would have to be closed to traffic, or be operated by a senior staff member.

Rezoning applications, requests for business licences and applications for building permits would start piling up, and the granting of such licences and applications would have to be done on a priority basis.

All projects carried out by city engineering crews would come to a complete halt.

Council meetings would continue to be held, but the agenda would be light because most city operations would virtually cease.

Water bills could no longer be paid at city hall. Developers, trying to push through projects that involve zoning matters, would have to be even more patient than at present.

All municipalities have contingency plans, but they refuse to give details at this time.

Emergency services

These plans include emergency services, such as repair of water main breaks.

They also include detailed instructions to residents regarding garbage disposal.

Municipalities are expected to announce garbage dropoff points where the refuse would either mount, or be picked up by non-union senior staff members.

Municipalities would also probably ask residents to cut the grass on boulevards in front of their homes.

Other parks maintenance, including the cutting of lawns, pruning of trees and planting of flowers would be reduced to virtually nothing.

The Capital Region would be similarly affected by a strike. The Juan de Fuca Recreation centre would have to be closed.

The processing of building permits for the unorganized areas would come to a crawl.

The Hartland Road garbage dump would probably be picketed, closing the area's major disposal site.

Regional senior staff would have their hands full providing minimum service at sewage disposal facilities, such as the Macaulay Point outfall.

Lum won't elaborate

Saanich mayor Ed Lum would not elaborate on his municipality's plans for operating in the event of a strike. He said those plans will be announced if and when they are needed.

Spokesmen at Saanich municipal hall are not expecting to need their emergency plans until after Jan. 31, when a meeting is scheduled with mediator Clark Gilmour.

About 375 employees would be affected and Saanich, like Victoria would be left with only about 35 senior personnel to do everything from answering phones to repairing water mains.

Planner Tom Loney said Thursday he and assistant planner Gil Laurenson would have their department all to themselves during a strike. Unlike the city, professional planners in Saanich are unionized.

The already-slow processing of rezoning applications would be reduced to a trickle and developers who have projects under construction probably would not be able to secure necessary inspections and permits.

Loney fears some smaller builders might find themselves in serious financial trouble as a result.

Spokesmen for Oak Bay and Esquimalt municipalities refused to comment on how their municipalities would be affected.

Peter Cairns, Esquimalt municipal-treasurer, refused to say whether any alternate plan has been arranged to supply needed services that may be cut off.

A spokesman for Oak Bay also refused comment.

However, the spokesman said: "There are plans made for handling all these things."

The only union members on North Saanich municipal staff are the five public works department employees.

Work contracted out

A municipal official said most work in North Saanich is contracted out and about the only effect a lockout would have on the municipality is that minor road repairs would not be done, and some drainage ditches would not be cleared.

In Sidney, a total of 17 workers are union members and lockout would hit fairly hard. However, none of the officials would forecast what results such an event would have on the town.

UVic pays $12,400 to buy off censure

With a payment of $12,400 into a teacher's fund, the University of Victoria is expected to get out from under a censure placed on it four years ago.

UVic's new president, Howard Petch, and Canadian Association of University Teachers president Richard Spencer made a joint announcement Thursday of a proposed settlement of a dispute which arose when the contracts of three professors were not renewed.

The money is to be placed in a special trust fund to be established by CAUT "to assist those individuals whose academic careers may have been damaged" during controversy at the University in 1970-71.

S. J. Cunliffe, chairman of the university board of governors, said the action is being taken simply to settle the dispute. It in no way acknowledges any fault.

He hopes the action will contribute to a better feeling among faculty staff and students and enable the UVic Faculty Association to increase its membership and play a more effective role at the university.

The Canadian Association-imposed c e n s u r e was designed to warn prospective faculty that there was no assurance of academic freedom at a particular university, but a university spokesman said the censure had not prevented UVic getting high calibre faculty.

Spencer welcomed the contribution and said he is prepared to recommend to the May meeting of the CAUT board and council that the censure be lifted.

The trust fund will be administered by CAUT which has agreed to make a payment of $2,600 to the fund.

The money is to be used to provide study leave support and other financial assistance to individuals who were affected.

'Acupuncture not panacea'

Acupuncture's use as an anesthetic during surgery is of limited value, even in China, where the technique was developed more than 5,000 years ago, the president of the Acupuncture Foundation of Canada said in Victoria Thursday.

Only about 20 per cent of patients respond well to acupuncture anesthesia and, even then, it may not offer complete freedom from pain during surgery, Dr. Elie Cass told members of the Men's Canadian Club of Victoria.

Although acupuncture results in less shock to the body than the usual anesthetic, Cass said that with the "great advances in western anesthesia," acupuncture for this purpose won't gain acceptance.

Even in China, he said, acupuncture is used only on selected patients.

The greatest beneficial use of the technique, he said, is for pain relief.

But he warned the technique is not a panacea for a wide range of medical problems and its use has best results in treating such "reversible" diseases as allergies.

Acupuncture is of no value in treating someone with cancer or a brain tumor, Cass said.

He contended that control of acupuncture must remain with the medical profession, otherwise death or disability could result.

He cited several examples of non-medical acupuncturists inserting needles in patients' hearts, causing death, and a similarly fatal case where a needle was stuck in the base of the patient's brain.

Because non-medical practitioners have no knowledge of anatomy and other subjects, and cannot perform diagnoses, a patient with a brain tumor could receive endless acupuncture treatments that relieve the pain but don't treat the tumor.

Cass said that although doctors don't know how acupuncture works, he doesn't feel uncomfortable using it because, he explained, many medical treatments, such as pain-relieving drugs and shock therapy for some mental patients, are not fully understood.

B.C. Winter Festival opens, expects 35,000

More than 35,000 British Columbians are expected to take part in the 1975 British Columbia Winter Festival which was officially opened Thursday with a luncheon in The Empress and a stage presentation in Newcombe auditorium, Provincial Museum.

Health Minister Dennis Cocke, who replaced ailing Provincial Secretary Ernest Hall as host and speaker at the luncheon, said there will be a program of recreational and cultural events in 80 communities and 18 ski areas of the province over a period of 26 days.

Fifteen community festivals and more than 300 events will be staged, he said, which is double the participation and number of events of last year's program.

Cocke explained that many cultural events have been added to the traditional sports activities featured in the past.

Community festivals have increased from five to 15, he added.

"Several of these community-wide programs, such as the Kelowna Snofest, the Columbia Valley Winter Carnival and the Dawson Creek Winter Festival, are a direct result of the work done in those areas by the British Columbia Festival Office and members of their organizing committee," he said.

The health minister stated that his government, in the past 29 months, had recognized the needs of British Columbians for leisure services.

Research projects and studies had led to the implementation of programs designed to meet those needs, including the establishment of the Facilities Fund.

"Since the spring of 1973," he said, "more than $32 million have been granted to aid in the construction of arenas, playing fields, community activity centres, swimming pools and many other facilities where people can participate in activities of their special interest."

The province's Physical Fitness and Amateur Sports Fund and the Cultural Fund have each been increased to $20 million, making available more than $2 million annually for development and support of programs in sports, recreation and the several branches of the arts, Cocke said.

Another related program, he pointed out, is Action B.C. which was developed to encourage active participation by all British Columbians in personal fitness and health programs.

Cocke referred to two reports tabled in the Legislature during the past year.

One was on leisure services and was prepared by Dr. Eric Broom, assistant professor of physical education and recreation at the University of British Columbia.

The other was titled Access to the Arts and was prepared by Nini Baird, director of Simon Fraser University's centre for communications and the arts, and a member of the Canada Council.

Broom's report contains recommendations on the concept, structures and procedures for the delivery of recreation, physical fitness and amateur sports services in B.C.

Cocke said many of the recommendations have been fully implemented while others are receiving consideration.

As a result of Ms. Baird's report, a new Provincial Arts Board has been established, Cocke said, and "new directions and progress in the development of the arts throughout the province are expected in the very near future."

Cocke urged sports and recreation people at the luncheon to take "maximum advantage of the forthcoming British Columbia Spring Festival" that will run for 33 days between May 15 and June 16.

Closing date for submissions is Feb. 15, he said, and information is available through community recreation branch offices or the festival office in Vancouver.

Naden, Esquimalt

Forces bands won't be cut

A cost-cutting move by the defence department to phase out four of nine regular forces bands will not affect the Naden band or the Canadian Forces School of Music at CFB Esquimalt, Canadian Forces spokesman said Thursday.

The nine regular bands cost $6 million a year to maintain, the spokesman said, and the cutback will save about $2.5 million annually.

Defence Minister James Richardson said in Ottawa he was reluctant to take the action. "Because of the importance we attach to all regular force bands, we are still attempting to find other ways of saving funds," he said, "before final implementation of our decision."

At Esquimalt, a spokesman said the phasing-out will be gradual with no set target date.

Personnel will be reduced to 305 from 465. All bandsmen in the country will be given three options — early retirement, training for other trades, or assistance in obtaining employment in civilian bands or other fields.

Those who remain, in addition to the Naden band, include the CFB Stadacona band in Halifax, La Musique du Royal 22e Regiment of Quebec City, the Canadian Forces central band in Ottawa and the Training Command band in Winnipeg.

Slated to be disbanded are the Air Transport Command band in Kingston, Ont., the Royal Canadian Regiment band in Gagetown, N.B., the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry band in Calgary, and the Royal Canadian Artillery band in Montreal.

There are more than 100 authorized bands in the armed forces, 66 of them reserve bands and 39 of them authorized volunteer bands, the latter formed by members of the regular forces, which receive some financial assistance from the defence department. Of the 100 authorized, 95 are active.

Ferries need new officers

B.C. Ferries has launched an extensive long-term recruiting campaign for marine engineers and certified deck officers, general manager Charles Gallagher said Thursday.

He said there is a worldwide shortage of qualified personnel in both fields and B.C. Ferries has to make its move early with three new vessels coming into service in 1976.

Knight seeking Jobless benefits

Dr. Stanley Knight, fired from his job as head of the research and development division of the education department last week, applied for unemployment insurance Thursday.

He listed as job preferences either director of research and development for the provincial government or dean of education at an established university.

At the time of his dismissal, Knight was earning $498 a week. Unemployment benefits will total $123 a week before income tax deductions which should leave him around $100 a week.

He should receive his first UIC cheque in mid-February.

After registering as unemployed, Knight said he was still disturbed about the rest of the research and development staff being muzzled by deputy minister Jack Fleming.

Fleming reminded senior staff members Tuesday that the Public Service oath prevented them from expressing opinions on internal departmental matters and warned them they could be dismissed from their jobs if they talked to the press.

"I'm really upset that they have that type of restriction of free speech," Knight said. "I think the problems of education and society are so important that we must have the information in the public realm."

He said he couldn't think of any topic ever discussed with Education Minister Eileen Dailly and others that couldn't be public information.

Knight said there was speculation that the next move of the government would be to break up the research and development team and scatter the staff through other departments.

"That would be a tragedy," he said. "The division has been working hard on such problems as the right to an education, with emphasis on handicapped children or children with exceptional learning problems."

Other moves in the affair saw Premier Barrett replying to Knight's request for re-instatement. In a brief note, the premier said he had referred the letter to the minister of education.

Knight has opened grievance proceedings with the Public Service Commission but said he was unsure when hearing would begin.

If current trend persists

Crime to rise 50%

VANCOUVER (CP)—The chairman of the B.C. Police Commission said Thursday that if the current trend is maintained the crime rate in B.C. will increase by 50 per cent in the next three years.

John Hogarth said that on a police-to-population ratio, B.C. needs 500 more policemen to bring it up to the national average. However, on a police-to-crime ratio, the province needs 2,000 more policemen.

Hogarth told a one-day seminar on policing in B.C. that he would settle for 800 more policemen in the next three years.

The 800 new men would give a reasonable level of service provided new strategems are adopted to make the best use of police resources, he said, adding that the requirements are the assessments of professionals and should not be cut back.

Earlier, federal Solicitor-General Warren Allmand told provincial Attorney-General Alex Macdonald that he is not inflexible on the matter of federal-provincial cost sharing for the RCMP.

The contracts between Ottawa and most provinces to provide RCMP service expire in April, 1976.

Hogarth said Ottawa is proposing a 20-per-cent cut in it's contribution toward provincial RCMP and a 40-per-cent cut for municipal forces.

"It's not the time to shift priorities into the back end of the justice system," Hogarth said.

Macdonald said the federal government will be paying 50 per cent of the cost in the last year of the current contract, with federal participation having increased by 1 per cent annually during the 10-year agreement.

The solicitor-general said the RCMP contracts were never intended as a subsidy program and continuation of the 50-per-cent federal contributions would establish a new principle.

A change in policy would mean large amounts of money would go to Ontario and Quebec which have their own provincial police forces, he said.

Allmand said the federal government has appointed a special task force to examine criminal justice which is "a dog's breakfast of a constitutional matter."

He said he was prepared to increase spending on Vancouver RCMP who are involved in enforcing federal responsibilities. He said the Vancouver RCMP drug squad will be increased this year to 86 from 69.

The minister said he agrees B.C. has a unique policing problem with the heavy drug traffic, but added that every area has a different crime problem.

"In B.C. it's narcotics. In Montreal it's armed robbery, loan sharking and organized crime."

Bingo trial adjourned to Feb. 3, prosecutors enter all documents

The trial of a Victoria couple, facing two counts of theft of $3,000 by conversion of funds from bingos operated by the London Boxing and Athletic club and its women's auxiliary, between February 1971 and December 1972, was adjourned Thursday until Feb. 3.

The adjournment after the second day of testimony was necessary because Judge M. L. T. Drake has previous commitments for next week.

Crown prosecutors David Lisson and Donald Farquhar on Thursday finished entering all the necessary documents — mostly financial records — in their case against Harold and Ivy Morris.

Farquhar, in his submission to the jury Wednesday, alleged that the Morrises were in control of the London Boxing and Athletic Club and its women's auxiliary during the February 1971 to December 1972 period.

He further alleged that the accused couple set aside cash from club bingo games to pay accounts at B.C. Hydro and Victoria Press and later paid those accounts through cheques drawn on the club's bank account.

In so doing, he alleged, they converted cash to their own use.

Among the witnesses testifying Thursday were Vancouver city police sergeant William Thorpe, a handwriting specialist, who said all documents bearing Ivy Morris' signature were in fact signed by her and some of the documents with Harold Morris' signature were signed by him.

Other witnesses included employees of both B.C. Hydro and Victoria Press, who said the accused couple had incurred accounts with their companies.

These accounts usually involved a $20 fee for bus rental and a $30 charge for advertising for each bingo game.

Victoria youth jailed 4 years

A prison term totalling four years was ordered Thursday in Victoria County Court for an 18-year-old Victoria youth who admitted criminal negligence causing bodily harm, indecent assault and theft of a vehicle.

Richard Wayne Steele, 1040 Rockland, was sentenced by Judge J. C. Bowk following pleas of guilty earlier in the week as Steele was about to go on trial.

The charges resulted from three incidents within a one-day period in mid-November — in order, theft of the vehicle, an attempt to run over a youth with the vehicle and an indecent assault on a young woman.

Bowk said testimony of drunkenness of Steele "does not excuse the crime" and noted Steele was fined $400 less than a year ago in Vancouver for criminal negligence.

No one was injured seriously in the Victoria crimes.

Victim 'smelled of drink'

The doctor who attended to Georgina Head, 61, of Galiano Island, who died after being struck by a car Saturday, testified at a coroner's inquest Thursday that Mrs. Head had the odor of alcohol on her breath.

Dr. Abdel Ibrahim said she had sustained head injuries, severe bruising to her brain, a fractured thigh bone, and was in a deep coma until she died Tuesday.

Sidney RCMP said Mrs. Head was hit by a car as she crossed Patricia Bay Highway near Beacon during a visit to friends in the Sidney area.

A pathologist was not available for the opening of the inquest at Sand's Mortuary on Quadra.

Sidney coroner Gordon Gerrie is presiding at the inquest which will resume at 7 p.m. Feb. 3 in Sidney Court House.

Fisheries picks co-ordinator

Robert McMynn has been appointed fisheries co-ordinator to the provincial government. McMynn's appointment was announced Thursday by Recreation and Conservation Minister Jack Radford.

McMynn has been associated with the fisheries branch since 1949. He holds a master's degree in zoology from the University of B.C.

Is it necessary?

Radical breast surgery

By WARREN CARAGATA
Colonist Reporter

In 1973, about 81 Greater Victoria women may have gone through the trauma of having a radical mastectomy for nothing.

In that year, about 195 women had breast removal operations, ranging from surgery to remove only a cancerous tumor and some of the surrounding tissue, to radical mastectomies, where the tumor, the breast, lumph nodes under the arm, chest muscle tissue and sometimes the breastbone, are taken out.

Sheilah Thompson, director of the health services division of Douglas College in New Westminster, and a director of the B.C. Medical Centre, said there is a possibility that radical mastectomies should not be done at all.

She said Dr. Ray Lawson, of the Westmount Breast Clinic in Montreal, advocates other forms of treatment instead of radical breast surgery, and there is an argument that treatment doesn't affect survival rates.

Haegert
. . . "statistical war"

Dr. Scott Dunbar, a Vancouver doctor who has proposed that the provincial government establish a breast cancer screening program, said that when cancer is detected early, and is treated by simple mastectomy—where only the breast tissue is excised—85 per cent of the women remain "cured" after five years.

But after the cancer has spread to the armpit, he said, the survival rate ranges between 40 and 45 per cent, regardless of the method of treatment.

"I wish," Ms. Thompson said, "I could believe that the extent of the operation was medically sound on the basis of research.".

Melanie Conn and Marty Wendt, both of the Vancouver Womens' Health Collective, said in a recent interview that survival rates following different treatments are the same and asked why doctors "do all that kind of heavy surgery" if it isn't necessary to keep that patient alive longer.

Doctors think they know best, they said, and aren't willing to listen to different opinions.

However, Victoria's Dr. Joe Haegert said the radical mastecomy controversy is a battle in a "statistical war."

He said women should definitely be involved in deciding what treatment they require but added that studies done at the University of Washington show better 10-year survival rates after radical mastectomies.

Doctors will have to get used to having their patients talk about what form of treatment they think is best, he said.

Ms. Thompson said that, although the issue of the best form of treatment is important, "what I'm really concerned about is the right of patients to be informed."

She complained that physicians build a "mystique" around medical practise and "that's what I'm questioning.".

When doctors do consult patients about treatment preference, they usually do it after the cancer has been diagnosed, and Ms. Conn said that is "not exactly the time for her to take her life into her own hands."

The discussion should begin when cancer is first suspected, she said.

As well, doctors often put the issue in such a context that refusing his advice seems ridiculous, the two women claimed.

Ms. Thompson said she is not against doctors, but said they have been used to making decisions for people and are having to adjust as more women ask for alternative treatment.

Treatment or operation

A decision to be made!

Joan J. discovered two weeks ago that she has a malignant turmor in her left breast.

Her family doctor told her she has had the cancer for about seven months, and she is now faced with a decision that about six per cent of British Columbia women have to make.

She is 54 years old and has to decide if she will accept the usual treatment for breast cancer — having the breast removed — or go against her doctor's wishes and try one of the alternative treatments.

The cancerous lump is about five centimetres in diameter and is located in the upper left corner of her left breast. Her doctors told her she is the typical breast cancer patient, but that doesn't make her feel any better.

Joan first went to her doctor for a breast examination after she found a painless lump in her breast.

Her doctor said most breast cancer victims feel no pain, but added that she should tell her daughter, who has an increased chance of getting the disease because Joan has it. He said the daughter should examine her own breasts after every period and look for dimpled skin, discharge, retracted nipples, or any change in breast size.

"Tell her that if she finds a lump, she should immediately have an examination and a mammography," the doctor said.

"All girls in high school should be taught how to check their breasts," the doctor said.

Joan recalled her fear when she first went into hospital to have the lump removed so that pathologists could determine if it was cancerous.

She had to sign a form giving her surgeon permission to remove the breast, although she didn't then know if she had cancer.

When she came out of anesthetic, her first thought was whether she still had both breasts, and although the surgeon didn't remove the breast, Joan realized that he could have.

She later read that she could have been spared that anguish — that if the lump was maligant, she could have waited at least several days, and some authorities say as long as several months to have the breast removed, without affecting her chances of survival and recovery.

And she read that a radical mastectomy, which her doctor recommended, doesn't necessarily mean she will live longer.

But no one knows for sure, and she still has breast cancer — and still has a decision to make.

First child at early age lowers risk, doctors say

Women who have their first child at an early age run a lower risk of getting breast cancer, according to an article in a recent issue of the Canadian Medical Association Journal.

"While it is neither practical or socially desirable that all young women bear children, a person at high risk . . . might consider earlier pregnancy where compatible with planning of family and career," an article by Dr. Robert Morgan and Damodar Vakil, both of Toronto, says in the Nov. 16 issue of the journal.

The article also suggests the possibility of preventive simple mastectomy where a "more drastic form" of primary prevention" is required.

However, although "there may be some justification for this approach," the authors said they would not recommend it because all risk factors are not known and fully understood.

A family history of breast cancer is the major risk factor outlined in the article, followel by late age of the first pregnancy, or having no children, early menstruation and late menopause.

Dr. Joe Haegert, of Victoria, said in an interview that women with the highest incidence of the disease are Northern Europeans, or women of that descent living in North America.

Although the cause of the disease is unknown, Haegert said women who have had their ovaries removed also stand a better chance of avoiding breast cancer.

"But, in general, anything that cuts down the number of ovulations seems to reduce breast cancer," he said.

If a woman has had breast cancer before, she is also more likely to get cancer in the other breast, he explained, but there "is no evidence at all that birth control pills cause breast cancer."

Breast cancer in women in their 20s is rare, he said, most usually striking women older than 45.

Cases rare for males

Men get breast cancer too.

Of the 199 mastectomies done in 1973 in the Capital Region, at least three were performed on male patients at Veterans' Hospital.

Dr. Joe Haegert, a Victoria doctor, said male breast cancer is rare, but when it does occur, usually in older men, it is highly malignant.

Pacemaker aids newborn baby

A pacemaker has been implanted in the heart of a newborn baby, called by a hospital spokesman one of the youngest patients ever to receive the battery - powered life sustainer.

"It's just been one miracle after the other down there at the hospital," said the father, Clay Dixon. "Ten years ago she would've died. I never would've imagined a thing like this could happen."

A temporary pacemaker was implanted in the heart of Alisa Marie Dixon during exploratory surgery on Jan. 11, the day after she was born. A day later she received a permanent one.

"I'm sure Alisa is one of the youngest ever to get a pacemaker," said Karen Krantz, a spokesman for the Long Beach Memorial Hospital children's medical centre.

The baby, born in nearby San Pedro, suffered from a heart blockage and a variety of other congenital heart defects. She was what is called a "blue baby."

The baby was reported in stable condtion in the hospital's intensive care unit for new-borns.

DRIFTWOOD

ann landers

Dear Ann Landers: Am I sick or am I a normal mother? When my 17-year-old daughter has a problem with a boyfriend and cries from being disappointed or hurt, I cry to. (Not in front of her. I go where she can't see me.)

When she is happy about something wonderful that has happened, I'm right there with her, on cloud nine.

I was popular when I was a teenager, so I don't have to relive my youth through my daughter. My own marriage is a good one so I'm not escaping from reality by fantasizing. Am I crackers or what? — Canadian Candor.

Dear C. C.: It's normal for a parent to empathize with a child. You'd be crackers if you didn't. But to shed tears over her little disappointments and hurts is a bit much. Either you aren't busy enough or you are identifying in a way that is unhealthy. Check the umbilical cord and see if perhaps it isn't a little too short.

Dear Ann Landers: A giant raspberry to "Turned Off," who thinks birthday parties for one-and two-year-olds are ridiculous. Sure it's dumb to invite people you haven't seen since the wedding, but such a celebration is wonderful for close friends and relatives who have been following the child's growth and development since birth.

In these days when the family circle is being murdered, it's a treat to get together and celebrate a young child's birthday. Even if the kid doesn't know what's going on, he at least senses the love and festive aura that surround him, and these days that's a big plus — Please Invite Me To Yours.

Dear Please: I'm for any happy get-together that gives people a chance to express love and concern for one another. Lord knows there are enough of the other kind.

Dear Ann Landers: That "New - Look Bride" who plans to Xerox her thank-you notes and distribute them at her wedding (rolled up and tied with a yellow ribbon) was enough to make me write my first letter to a newspaper.

Too bad the unsuspecting guests don't have access to a crystal ball. They could then present the clod with a rolled-up message tied with a red ribbon saying, "Since you will be to busy to write me a thank-you note I will be too busy to shop for you. So let's just shake hands and say, 'Congratulations.'" Sign me — Glad I'm Not Invited.

Dear Glad: You and at least 500 others.

Dear Ann Landers: Two years ago, I took a short course in Human Relations. Last night I went through some old notebooks and found this "lesson" which has been invaluable to me. I would like to share it with others. — Better For it.

200 men in great demand

LONDON (Reuter) — The 200 men, who joined a club here for lonely persons more than 60 years old, are in great demand. More than 9,000 women have joined.

"It's not fair to the men," said Roz Osborn, founder of the club.

She said she received letters from the men saying: "Please, no more. We can't do it. There's too many of them."

"So far we've had 12 weddings," she added.

More families leave pit side

ASBESTOS, Que. (CP) — Five more families have been evacuated from homes on the rim of an open-pit asbestos mine as earth slides continue to threaten this community 85 miles northeast of Montreal. Police chief Adrien Larivee said a second house tumbled 100 feet into the pit Wednesday morning and two more houses may follow. Fifty families now have left their homes.

Women's Year paid tribute in Commons

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons paid tribute Wednesday to International Women's Year amid accusations that the government is more interested in rhetoric than reforming laws affecting women's rights.

Ed Broadbent, New Democrat parliamentary leader was jeered by Liberal MPs when he questioned the government's sincerity in endorsing the aims of women's year organizers.

The United Nations has designated 1975 International Women's Year. Programs to promote the status of women are planned around the world.

Broadbent said too much time has been spent on speeches, conferences, investigative commissions, and slick advertising campaigns in support of women's rights. Needed now were legislative changes backing the principles that politicians have endorsed.

All party leaders, including Prime Minister Trudeau, endorsed women's year objectives as the Commons reopened after a one - month Christmas recess.

Trudeau, asking all Canadian to work for true equality between men and women, said the government will contribute substantially to women's year.

One bill is already before Parliament to remove sex inequalities in eight federal statutes and another will be introduced to establish a federal commission on human rights, he said. But the most fundamental changes must come in individual attitudes, he added.

"Real freedom of opportunity for women will come only when society recognizes that women have the same right to pursue whatever goals they may individually choose."

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said substantial progress has been made but women still must be "abler, smarter and more industrious" than men to succeed in many jobs.

He was applauded good naturedly by Liberal members when he said the nine women in the 264-seat Commons had to be "a good deal abler . . . than I to get here."

Social Credit Leader Real Caouette said Parlaiment is better for having women MPs but more should be elected.

"Representation by women raises the standard of parliamentary democracy in Canada."

Women must play a full role and be treated as equals at all levels of society, he said.

Movie actor Arthur Hill

If I played Hitler I'd have to like him

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—"If I were to be cast as Hitler I'd find something to like about him," said Arthur Hill.

The Canadian-born star of Owen Marshall on the tube for three years, and veteran of a score of movies including The Andromeda Strain, found it necessary to employ his philosophy in his newest assignment.

Hill portrays author John Gunther in Death Be Not Proud, (Feb. 4 ABC-TV), an adaptation of the late author's autobiographical novel on the death of his 17-year-old son.

Hill is no admirer of Gunther. And recently he has become disdainful of Richard Burton for his controversial attack on Winston Churchill before and after portraying the British statesman on television.

"I was really surprised at Burton's attitude," Hill said.

"I don't know whether it was the old Welsh resentment of the English or simply a matter of drumming up interest and controversy for the television program. But I can't understand it.

"Seems to me an actor must find something to like in the character he's playing. Even Hitler.

"I played Benedict Arnold once for the BBC. From Arnold's lights he must have operated on some basis of inner integrity. Every man must have some sense of self worth or he wouldn't be able to live.

"If you're going to get inside a character you've got to find something likable about him to make him acceptable to himself.

"As for Gunther, he was less sympathetic than he would have the world believe. I read between the lines of his book. He was unable to relate to other people—especially his son—on a personal level."

Hill's calm, cool exterior, which determines many of the roles he plays, is only skin deep. Deep down there are a good many banked fires in the man.

"Actors should be dealing with the emotions of their characters, not their intellect,' he said.

"That's why the most difficult role an actor plays is that of a man who is more intelligent than he is. How can an actor pretend to be more intellectual than he truly is? It can't be done without being pretentious."

'Do you come here often?'

Hiroo Onoda, 52, dances with Playboy Club Bunny Barbi in Chicago. Onoda was Second World War Japanese lieutenant who hid in Philippine jungle for 30 years after the war, then emerged and gave up. At present Onoda is touring United States. He hopes to settle in Brazil.

Russia, U.S. combine for movie

MOSCOW (UPI) — Work has started in Leningrad on The Blue Bird, the first Soviet-American feature film, Tass says. Its stars include Elizabeth Taylor and Jane Fonda.

The film, a co-production of the Lenfilm Studio and 20th Century Fox, is directed by George Cukor and based on a fable for children written by Belgian Maurice Maeterlinck, winner of the 1911 Nobel Prize for literature.

The lead is played by Nadezhda Pavlova, an 18-year-old ballerina.

Left over Mary still sings

NEW YORK (AP)—Mary of the folksinging trio Peter, Paul and Mary is still singing, but now she is host of her own radio show syndicated each week through the United States.

Mary Travers and Friend, a one-hour show, features chats with prominent music groups or solo performers, as well as samples of their old and new recordings and those of other artists they admire.

She says one future guest is reclusive folk musician-millionaire Bob Dylan, a friend of hers since the early 1960s when, as she puts it, "we hung out in the same coffee houses and starved together."

A tall, friendly woman of 38, she has worked solo since 1970, when the trio she calls PPM broke up after nine years of fame for its music and its involvement in the civil rights and anti-war movements.

She also is finishing an autobiography dealing mainly "with growing up left in New York" in addition to her show which, its producer, Twenty First Communications Corp., says began in 83 cities.

She is married to Jerry Taylor, publisher of National Lampoon magazine. The magazine is owned by Twenty First Communications, but she says her husband played no part in setting up her radio show.

Ruby Keeler recovered

GREAT FALLS, Mont. (AP) — Actress-dancer Ruby Keeler has recovered from brain surgery and has returned to her home in Laguna Beach, Calif., a hospital spokesman here said.

Miss Keeler, 64, was admitted Nov. 20 to correct what surgeons said was a bulge inside a blood vessel in her brain. She had been on the critical list and under intensive care until Dec. 4.

9 IN MEMORIAM

NAGY—In loving memory of mother Eva, who passed away Jan. 24, 1970, and father Steve, who passed away Oct. 5, 1973.
To hide my sorrow I do pray try
I smile with others, alone I cry
These words are written with sad regret,
Of parents I loved and will never forget.
No longer here our lives to share,
But in our hearts they are always there.
—Sadly missed by daughter Thelma and family.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR HE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
—WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS.

It's been a big week for Canadian broadcasting news what with the landmark Ontario court ruling on cable-TV, the new FM rules and the CBC's apparent decision to take over land in Victoria for Trudeau knows what.

All of these stories have been dealt with on the news pages of the Colonist except for one interesting point.

The Luncheon Date Luncheon Date Bob Switzer Ed Allen

The Canadian Association of Broadcasters greeted the new FM rules with cries of gloom, doom and "we'll go out of business." In Victoria, Walter Cownden of CFMS said he was excited at the prospect of new FM programming and, in effect, couldn't wait to get at it.

My congratulations to Walter for his realism and his enthusiasm. I wish the neanderthal CAB would catch what he has.

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Thursday's answer—A most influential man who lived from 1809 to 1849, flunked out of West Point and was portrayed by Shepperd Strudwick in a 1942 movie had to be Edgar Allen Poe. With him, the mystery and chiller would be much different.

Today's question—Fred Quimby lived from 1886 to 1965 and you have seen his name in the credits on TV screens and in movie theatres hundreds of times or more. What did he do for a living? Who were his two best known fictional creations? The answers Saturday.

"I shall pass this way but once . . . then, again at 8:30 tonight and again at 11 . . . and tomorrow at noon . . ."

Friday highlights

CHANGES: Channel 6 starts Robert Blake's Tomalike Baretta at 7 p.m. while channel 4 has the premiere of Hot 1 Baltimore (see below) and Odd Couple moves to a new time of 9:30 p.m. on ABC.

5:30 p.m.—NBA basketball, Seattle at Chicago—11.

8:00—Cable 10 has come up with another fine special: the 90-minute Serengeti Shall Not Die—10.

● 9:00—Viewers should check the debut of Hot 1 Baltimore if only because it makes Norman Lear the first producer with series on all three U.S. networks at the same time—4.

11:30—A new ABC suspense stars Tige Andrews as The Werewolf of Woodstock. Michael Parks and Meredith McRae hunt him down—4.

1:00 a.m.—The night's only rock doings—5.

Friday movies

12:45 noon—Dragoon Wells Massacre (humdrum 1957 western), Dennis O'Keefe, Barry Sullivan. Nor your all-time biggies—8.

1:00 p.m.—Mississippi (amusing 1935 antique). W. C. Fields and Bing Crosby in one picture: our cup runneth over—11.

3:30—Young Dillinger (1965 Nick Adams nastiness). They never made the obvious sequels: Young Hitler, Young Nixon—5.

8:00—Kelly's Heroes (bearable 1970 war action), Clint Walker, Telly Savalas, many more. My favorite Kelly says Grace—7.

8:30—Third Girl from the Left (soapy 1973 Kim Novak flop)—8.

9:00—The Monster Who Challenged the World (1957 horror hokum), Hans Conreid. No, Matilda, it's not about a TV columnnist—11.

9:00—Play Dirty (average 1969 Rommel war actioner), Michael Caine and friends. A title like that could be about a TV columnist—12.

11:25—The Spy Who Came In From the Cold (1966, today's best film), Richard Burton, Oskar Werner, Peter Van Eyck, Claire Bloom—12.

11:45—Calling Doctor Death (1943 Lon Chaney amusement). With the misused Patricia Morison and, if you recall her, you're over 40—7.

12:00—Nylon Noose (1963 no-names nothing)—6.

12:00—Doctor Blood's Coffin (1961 horror, also amusing), Kieron Moore. You ought to see Doctor Blood operate—8.

1:00 a.m.—Black Cat (entertaining 1941 chiller), Basil Rathbone, Broderick Crawford. Watch for Alan Ladd in a bit part—7.

1:30—Sand (missable 1949 horse epic), Rory Calhoun. First a cat movie, then a sand movie; maybe the next is about boxing—6.

1:35—Call of the Wild (1955 Gable goes north, and no boxing). Famed mainly as the film where Loretta Young really, but briefly, fell in love with Gable—8.

2:15—Palm Beach Story (still dandy 1942 romanticomedy), Claudette Colbert, Joel McCrea. By far today's best—7.

Friday radio

6:30 p.m.—Western Canada hockey, Victoria at Brandon—CJVI (900).

8:00—The CBC starts a two-part profile of the late Montreal mayor Camilien Houde—CBU (690).

● —Recommended.

Probe continues

Plaza construction to begin March 1

By BILL SMITH
Colonist Correspondent

COURTENAY — Two large boxes containing "all documents dealing with two shopping centre developments in the city" were sent to Victoria recently, Mayor William Moore told council.

The exhibits were requested by Robert Prittie, inspector of municipalities, following charges by a group here alleging irregularities in connection with the shopping centre developments.

Moore said it took city hall staff several days to put together the documents at a cost to the taxpayer of $1,500.

The group of concerned citizens originally had charged conflict of interest, but in a telegram to Prittie on Jan. 7 the group's spokesman, downtown merchant Inno Schaefer, asked that all charges of conflict of interest be withdrawn from the inquiry they were seeking.

In a letter to Prittie which accompanies the documents, city administrator Derrick Ratcliffe, states that council is very upset with the allegations, especially in regard to the conflict of interest charges.

The administrator goes on to say that Ald. Robert McPhee disclosed to council that he held one or more shares in Moray Holdings Ltd. and that the company was at that time owners of the land on which the Commerce Capital Properites Ltd. shopping centre was to be constructed.

Ratcliffe said the alderman declared his interest in the land at the time the initial approach was made by the developer and from that time on he abstained from voting on the issue.

Dealing with the alleged involvement in the issue of Gordon Blackhall, chairman of the city's advisory planning commission. Ratcliffe said no recommendation to council was ever made by the APC on the matter of the location or otherwise of shopping centres in the city.

Blackhall is a member of the staff of Nanaimo Realty, the company involved in both the shopping centre which had been proposed for Ryan Road and the Commerce Capital Development at the southern entrance to the city.

Commerce Capital officials have signed a land-use contract with the city for the planned $5.2 million centre. Construction will start March 1, with completion set for March, 1975.

The second centre, which Dominion Construction was to build, appears to have fallen by the wayside, as the company did not meet a Dec. 31 deadline set by council for presentation of plans and signing of a land use contract.

At Monday night's meeting, council repealed the land-use contract bylaw which Dominion had failed to sign.

Another development in the protracted shopping centre hassle came this week in the form of a copy of a letter sent by Richard Von Fuchs of Courtenay, earlier this month to the inspector of municipalities.

The letter asks for an inquiry into shoppong centre development on the grounds that "the municipality is supposed to engage in planning, yet they did not consult any of the staff of five planners available at the Comox - Strathcona Board office.

"No professionals were involved, and the result completely contradicts a plan for the future growth of Courtenay which the city paid for a few years ago."

Von Fuchs also states that residents of neighboring areas were not consulted about their opinion of the increase in commercial traffic through their residential area — particularly on Fitzgerald Ave.

He also claims council ignored opposition to the shopping centre which was voiced at a public hearing in December.

Dan Roy, Don Presley and Dale McLachlin scored the other goals for Canadians, who led, 5-3, after two periods.

Errol Goulden, Gerry Blanchette, Bob Murluk and Baydon Robinson scored for Stockers and goalkeeper Brad Rix made 28 saves.

Cents obtain new coach

EDMONTON (CP) — Former veteran professional player Dave Amadio has been signed as an assistant coach by Calgary Centenials of the Western Canada Hockey League, general-manager Scotty Munro has announced.

Amadio replaces Eric Sutcliffe, who resigned Sunday following an 11-1 loss to Edmonton Oil Kings. Amadio, a 35-year-old native of Glace Bay, N.S., has been playing professional hockey since 1958 in a career that has taken him from the Western League to the now-defunct Eastern professional league, the American League, NHL, with Los Angeles Kings, and Central League. He finished his playing career as a defenceman with the Seattle Totems of the WHL last season.

Esquimalt Buccaneers can't seem to beat Victoria Nixons, but they manage to keep them from gaining ground in the South Island Junior "B" Hockey League.

Buccaneers maintained their league lead at five points Thursday by playing to a 5-5 draw with second-place Nixons at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

The teams have met five times this season. Esquimalt won the first encounter, 4-3, Victoria took the second, 6-4, but the next two games ended deadlocks.

Their final encounter of the season is Sunday at 6 p.m. at Memorial Arena.

Buccaneers led, 3-1, after two periods Thursday, but Nixons came back to take a 5-4 lead and Esquimalt needed a goal by John Bechtold at 18:44 of the third period to gain the tie.

Bechtold, Dave Lale, Paul McDonald and Mark Bowles scored the other Esquimalt goals, while Brian Matvenko (2), Grant Pert, Rob Wilson and Geordie Robertson scored for Victoria.

Football and drugs

Probe warranted in spite of denial

ST. LOUIS (AP)—A federal drug investigator said Thursday that a full-scale investigation is warranted despite a refusal by Roxie Ann Rice to corroborate a story that she was a courier of drugs for professional football and basketball players.

Thomas Maher, administrator of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration in St. Louis, said the DEA considered Miss Rice's story "authentic" and her account to police warrants "a full-scale investigation".

The 19-year-old St. Louis girl has denied that she ever told police of a cross-country caper to carry drugs to various athletes on the advice of Major Charles Wren, assistant chief of detectives.

"In the absence of an attorney, I felt I must take a protective role in her case," Maj. Wren said. "I do not want her to be exploited.

He also said she refused to take a lie detector test or to talk to any one of several persons in the National Football League who remember some of the incidents related in a 39-page intra-departmental police memo.

Maj. Wren has also refused to confirm that such a memo exists, saying only that he is investigating news reports.

Miss Rice was arrested Jan. 4 on charges of defrauding an innkeeper and frauduulently using a credit card, believed to be stolen from Ken Houston, a defensive back for Washington Redskins. She is still in jail.

The reports, leaked to the news media Tuesday, were based on Miss Rice's statement made during a six-hour session with St. Louis police and agents of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration.

The memo quoted Miss Rice as saying she was recruited to transport briefcases containing what she believed were narcotics to players in many NFL cities.

The memo said Miss Rice posed as Dr. Andiza Juzang of Ghana and dealt with players on the Redskins, Houston Oilers, St. Louis Cardianls, San Diego Chargers, Detroit Lions, Kansas City Chiefs and Cincinnati Bengals football teams.

She said she was recruited by a woman she now believes lives in Miami, the memo said.

Canadians earn medals in N.Z.

CHRISTCHURCH, N.Z. — Canadians earned two gold and two silver medals Thursday during opening day action in the New Zealand Games.

John Beers of Merritt cleared seven feet, one and a half inches to capture the high jump while little Becky Smith of Edmonton topped a fine field in the 200-metre individual medley in swimming competition. Her time of 2:23.23 beat the mark set by Leslie Cliff of Vancouver when she won the same event at the Commonwealth Games here last year.

Earning silver medals were Brenda Eisler of Burnaby with a long jump leap of 20 feet 6½ inches; and Maureen Crowley of Vancouver in the 800-metre track final.

Portable bridge to replace span

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A district highways manager said Wednesday a portable bailey bridge will be built as soon as possible to replace the bridge at Clearwater, destroyed when a semi-trailer truck plunged through it last week.

PROVINCIAL COURT

What Judge William Ostler called "a very great effort . . . a quite substantial accomplishment . . . really remarkable" saved a 23-year-old Victoria man from being sent to jail Thursday in Victoria Provincial Court.

Kenneth Wayne Ramsay, 1512 Brooke, had been found guilty by Ostler Dec. 31 after trial on an RCMP charge of possession of six capsules of heroin May 9 in the Colwood area and had a record of non-drug offences.

Defence lawyer Dermod Owen-Flood indicated a pre-sentence report favored a jail term and conceded the B.C. Appeal Court had ruled possessors of heroin should be jailed as a deterrent to others, unless there were unusual circumstances.

Owen-Flood then called four witnesses to show Ramsay had stopped using drugs after his arrest in May and had not only withdrawn from heroin use but also from the substitute methadone.

In addition, they said, Ramsay had helped his wife Alice get off heroin and into the methadone program. Prosecutor Malcolm Macaulay supported the pre-sentence recommendation for jail.

Ostler said judges should not be "carried away" by stories of rehabilitation and Ramsay normally would go to jail — but "I must decide which will be of more benefit to the public," whether Ramsay was jailed or continued to rehabilitate himself and his wife.

On balance, he said, "I have concluded that I will take a chance (although) I have to admit some hesitation and some doubt."

Ramsay was fined $500 and put on probation for two years.

□

"I'm very sorry for you but your friends have done you a very great disservice," Ostler told Arthur Elliot Inglis, 25, of 473 Marigold, who admitted impaired driving early Thursday in Victoria.

Inglis said he had been due to leave Thursday for a new job in Yellowknife and his friends gave a farewell party. One of the friends drove him home but stopped three blocks short and Inglis decided to try making the rest of the way himself.

He knew he shouldn't because he was drunk and had a previous conviction for impaired driving. Ostler said he realized a jail term might cost Inglis the new job but the law required it. He sentenced Inglis to 20 days.

□

The question in the case of Edmund Roderick Piggin, 17, was whether to increase the term of six months definite and nine months indeterminate which Piggin received Dec. 30 for a break-in and possession of marijuana.

Since that conviction, Piggin had pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of two other break-ins which occurred while he was in judicial interim release for the marijuana count. The latest break-ins took place Dec. 2 and 6 and saw $36, cigarettes and pop taken from two firms.

Ostler decided on a sentence of six months definite and 18 months indeterminate, starting Thursday. Piggin will therefore spend only a few extra weeks in detention but his later supervision period will be longer.

□

"There's entirely too much of this (in Victoria) . . . damage is simply colossal from this sort of thing," Ostler said in reference to a case of damage to business by an angry person.

The case involved Mae Donna Obleman, 21, address not known, who pleaded guilty Jan. 10 to a charge of mischief in kicking in a glass door at Scott's cafe, 650 Yates, earlier that day — and to a charge of possession of a small amount of marijuana when arrested.

Mrs. Obleman had been refused service because of a companion's conduct. Ostler took into consideration the fact she had spent 14 days in custody while awaiting sentence. He ordered a nominal one-day term for the marijuana and put Mrs. Obleman on six months' probation for the mischief, ordering her to pay Scott's $200 for the damage.

□

Albert Norman Laberge, 17, was sentenced by Ostler to five days in jail following a plea of guilty to a charge of possession of five small plastic bags of marijuana late Wednesday when police searched a Victoria home.

Laberge admitted convictions in 1974 for assault, theft and mischief and said he was unlawfully at large from an institute for young offenders at Haney in the Fraser Valley.

Ostler said he felt the most suitable penalty was a short jail term that would allow his early return to Haney.

□

Bail was set at $2,000 by Ostler for Richard Dale Smith, 20, of 820 Orono, who was charged with robbery with violence in a Jan. 10 holdup at the Safeway store, 475 Simcoe. The charge specified $847 was stolen from a woman cashier. Smith was remanded to next week for further hearing.

□

In traffic court, Ronald Cameron Brighton, 34, of 3547 Charnley, pleaded guilty to a charge of impaired driving Saturday in the Colwood area. He was sentenced by Judge F. S. Green to 30 days in jail to be served on weekends and was banned from driving for 15 months.

Fixed in a jiffy: she'll get a biffy

Equality of the sexes moved ahead Thursday in the city of Victoria at a cost of $2,250 to the taxpayers.

Claire Rickman, the only female employee at the city's maintenance yard in Beacon Hill Park, will get her own washroom.

The woman joined the parks department just before Christmas and had to share the "very heavily-used washrooms" with her male colleagues, parks director Clifford Bate told city council's parks committee Thursday.

Bate requested and got approval for the construction of a separate washroom for the lone secretary.

There was also an incident of male chauvinism at the meeting.

When Bate told the aldermen that more and more women are employed in England's parks departments in such jobs as "bedding-out crews," the aldermen hooted with laughter.

Bate then added: "Make that planting crews."

Penalty: Community work

By BRUCE LOWTHER
Colonist Reporter

One of the B.C. government's many programs to improve the provincial justice system will became visible for the first time Monday when a 27-year-old Victoria man goes to work in a Victoria community service organization.

Wayne Beaumont, 1324 Johnson, pleaded guilty Jan. 10 in the Victoria Provincial Court section of Judge Harold Alder to an Oak Bay charge of theft of two $10 folding lawn chairs Sept. 2 from an apartment balcony at 2707 Estevan.

Thursday, Alder put Beaumont on probation for six months and then became the first judge in Greater Victoria to add a condition that grew out of the Administration of Justice Act passed by the B.C. Legislature last May.

Alder ordered Beaumont to complete 40 hours of community service work as directed by Edward Stanton, the probation officer for the three adult sections in the court building at 633 Fisgard.

Stanton and community service supervisor Don Peterson said Beaumont, who works from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays as a painter, will do 2½ hours duty on each of four nights a week starting Monday running the front counter at the Victoria Boys' Club.

His 40 hours thus will be completed in four weeks. During the rest of his probation, his obligations will be reduced to obeying the law and reporting to the probation officer when required.

Community service and supervision make up only one of many programs the B.C. attorney-general's department is slowly putting into effect in hopes of improving justice. A few others are local justice councils, bail hostels, diversion groups and numerous changes in the jail system.

The service and diversion programs have become visible to the public first because their workers attend Judge William Ostler's main court section daily in furthering the basic program goals of giving judges new alternatives in bail and sentencing.

First to appear was Aberdeenshire native Stanton, 61, who has been a probation officer for 26 years in Scotland and B.C., coming to Victoria in 1968. Probation officers did court work in other buildings until he was named in mid-October as the first such officer on the adult court staff.

Before year-end, he was followed by Bernie Jordens, 34, and Linda Kreger, 27, from the five-member staff of the Community Diversion Centre at 508 Alpha, opened Oct. 1 on funds provided by the B.C. corrections service.

This month, they have been joined by community service supervisor Don Peterson, 41, whose job means less court time for him than the others. A native of Saskatchewan, he recently ended a 22-year RCMP career and was well known for police work in Colwood.

Since he joined Dec. 10, Peterson has been lining up community service jobs and has a chart on his office wall in the Masonic Temple at Fisgard and Douglas which lists scores of duties for sentenced persons — all unpaid, of course.

A few examples are knitting and sewing at the Red Cross, helping blind wheelchair patients at Mount St. Mary's office duties at Meals on Wheels, camp work for the Boy Scouts and cleanup work for several volunteer fire departments.

Once a judge sentences a person to community service, Stanton and Peterson pick the project. Peterson is to supervise all cases and with draw from any program a person who is not following all the rules. Stanton then could charge the person with breach of probation.

There are dozens of other aspects to the new court duties of probation officers but they all aim, as a government statement put it, at making an offender's relationship with the court "a more complete learning experience while satisfying legal requirements."

One change made by Ostler since Stanton took his new duties is a requirement that persons released on bail report frequently to Stanton instead of the old practice of reporting to police.

It is the areas of release on bail pending plea, trial or sentence that the diversion program comes into play. Jordens and Ms. Kreger work with Stanton in providing homes, jobs, counselling and other facilities for the accused.

They are well trained for the work. Ms. Kreger, born in New Hampshire, has master's degree in rehabilitation counselling and came to Victoria late in 1973. Jordens, a native of Manitoba, has spent most of his life here and has a master's in theology.

Stanton said many of the basics were worked out last spring at a B.C. Corrections Association seminar on alternatives in sentencing and are based "partly on English experience."

Community service will have a maximum of 100 hours to be completed within eight weeks. The accused persons must be willing to do the work and persons such as chronic drunkards will be excluded.

Stanton said the first known probation occurred 300 years ago in Boston when two men whose crime was not reported were ordered to work for a blacksmith — unpaid, of course.

Pelletier dims B.C.'s TV-10 bid

OTTAWA (CP) — Communications Minister Gerard Pelletier said Thursday the federal cabinet is not likely to go along with the B.C. government's request that a very high frequently (VHF) channel be set aside for educational television in southwestern B.C.

"One must realize that this request doesn't square with the long-established government policy that educational television should go on UHF and that VHF stations are kept for general broadcasting," Pelletier said.

He said any exceptions to the policy have been transitional and the Canadian Radio-Television Commission is authorized only to give ultra high frequency (UHF) stations for provincial use.

Pelletier said he expected the cabinet decision on Channel 10, the last remaining VHF channel in the area, in two or three weeks. Ron Fraser, assistant to CBC president Lauent Picard, said Thursday that negotiations to purchase a $500,000 strip of land on Blanshard between Hillside and Kings owned by the city of Victoria are dependant upon the CRTC awarding the government network Channel 10.

Fraser said the CBC plans for Victoria included both radio and television stations but the exact details of the project, to cost about $6 million, have not been decided.

He said the CBC's application to the CRTC, expected to be made in mid-February, will include plans for more than 10 hours of Victoria-produced programming for local, Vancouver Island and national consumption.

Meanwhile in Victoria, B.C. Communications Minister Robert Strachan said Pelletier's statement on the provincial request for Channel 10 tends to "make it more difficult for the province to develop a more adequate educational TV system."

If the CRTC does not award the channel to the CBC, Fraser said, a channel on a UHF broadcast band could be a possibility but that band lacks the strength to serve all of Vancouver Island.

He said Ontario met with additional expense when it went into UHF educational TV rather than the VHF system envisaged by B.C.

Strachan said he believed B.C. will be able to present a "very strong case" with the federal authorities on its submission for Channel 10.

Tax changes hit Channel 12

Time likely out, Digest may stay

Colonist Wire Services

OTTAWA — Tax amendments announced Thursday by State Secretary Hugh Faulkner will force Time magazine and Reader's Digest to close down operations here or become Canadian periodicals within a year.

Faulkner told the House of Commons the Income Tax Act will be amended to remove a special provision which permits Time and Reader's Digest, alone among foreign magazines, to share with Canadian publications a tax deductibility provision on advertising.

With the amendment, Time and Reader's Digest will be stripped of a special tax provision which allows advertisers to deduct the cost from their income tax.

Time indicated it would quit, the Digest is pushing "Canadianization" of its operations and Maclean's expressed its intention to fill the weekly newsmagazine gap.

Faulkner also told the Commons the Tax Act will be amended so sponsors can no longer deduct from income tax the cost of advertising in U.S. border stations, such as Bellingham's KVOS, which beam their broadcasts to Canada.

He estimated $20 million in advertising revenue goes to such U.S. stations each year.

KVOS said the tax changes put it in "a very awkward position" but it planned to stay in business.

Time and Reader's Digest have both maintained their Canadian editions could not compete and would have to be withdrawn if the special tax privileges were taken away.

Speaking outside the Commons, Faulkner admitted Time might close its Canadian operations but added "they have a year, until Jan. 1, 1976, to make decisions on that issue."

Meanwhile, a spokesman for Maclean-Hunter Ltd. said Maclean's magazine, now a monthly, will become a weekly newsmagazine to replace Time if it ceases publication in Canada.

Maclean's editor Peter Newman praised the amendments to the Income Tax Act as "a shot in the arm" for Canadian publishing.

"Trains en route will be terminated at Winnipeg westbound and at Edmonton eastbound and passengers will be bused or flown to their destinations at our expense," said Mike Matthews, a CNR public relations officer.

Sudden oil drop security threat to U.S.—Simon

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Treasury Secretary William Simon told Congress that any sudden interrruption of more than one million barrels a day in the United States oil supply would "clearly threaten to impair our national security."

Simon, in a Jan. 14 memorandum to Congress made public Thursday, said that "a recurrence of the 2.4-million barrel-a-day reduction which occurred during the 1973 OPEC embargo would have a prompt substantial impact on our economic well-being and, considering the close relation between this nation's economic welfare and our national security, would clearly threaten to impair our national security."

In an interview earlier this month, State Secretary Henry Kissinger said — and President Ford subsequently confirmed — that any oil-related action which threatened to "strangle" the United States might result in the use of force against foreign oil producers.

Simon added that "in the event of a worldwide political or military crisis, it is not improbably that a more complete interruption of the flow of imported petroleum would occur." "In that event, the total U.S. production of about 11 million barrels a day might well be insufficient to supply adequately a wartime economy," he said.

British plan referendum on market

LONDON (Reuter) — The British government announced Thursday its intention to hold a referendum by the end of June on continued membership in the European Common Market.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson told the House of Commons the Labor cabinet will make a clear recommendation after new membership terms have been negotiated.

Cabinet ministers then will be allowed to argue openly in favor or against staying in the common market.

It will be the first referendum ever held in all parts of Britain.

Hostage holder charged

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Donald Wayne Cline, a 22-year-old escaped convict, was charged Thursday with armed robbery following a bizarre sequence of events in which he held police at bay and four young children hostage in their home near here.

Police said other charges are pending against Cline, who was arrested at a London residence early Thursday after a zig-zagging police chase interspered with gunfire through a wide area of southwestern Ontario.

The armed robbery charge was laid in Woodstock, Ont., where Cline is being held without bail until he appears in court today.

The drama started Tuesday afternoon when provincial police, alerted that four men had held up a food store in nearby Thamesford, set out on a search of area homes where the robbers might have taken refuge.

Arriving at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Field, two officers were confronted by a gunman who disarmed them but did not detain them. Police said three other armed men also had burst into the home but left before they arrived.

The remaining gunman allowed Mrs. Field to leave the farmhouse but kept four of her young children inside while he bargained with police for $10,000 in ransom and a getaway car.

IRA offers to renew Ulster, U.K. truce

BELFAST (UPI) — The outlawed Irish Republican Army has decided to renew its ceasefire in Britain and Northern Ireland, a source said Thursday.

The disclosure came hours after a bomb believed set by the IRA shattered the lobby and restaurant of the 12-story Europa Hotel, the city's largest and a local landmark. No one was hurt.

Meanwhile, a suspected IRA bomb badly damaged a north London pumping station Thursday night in the first bombing incident in Britain in a month.

Scotland Yard said four persons, two of them men working in the station, were taken to a hospital suffering from shock.

The explosion blew out the door and windows and smashed a hole in the roof of the two-story building and broke water pipes inside. Police sealed off a side road because of flooding.

The ruling army council of the outlawed guerrilla organization reached its ceasefire decision Wednesday night, the source said, and will issue orders within the next 48 hours to its members to stop all violence.

A formal announcement was not expected until early next week.

There was no confirmation from Dublin, where the seven-man council has been in secret session all week, but IRA sources there said a meeting Wednesday between British officials and representatives of Sinn Fein, the IRA's political wing, was a hopeful sign.

The IRA's provisional wing declared an 11-day break in all "military" activities in northern Ireland and Britain Dec. 22 and then extended the truce to Jan. 16.

But it refused to prolong the ceasefire a second time and accused the British and Irish governments of failing to co-operate in the drive to end the strife that has claimed 1,147 lives here in the past 5½ years.

A British Army spokesman said the suspected victim of an IRA assassination found Wednesday beside a stolen car on the Newry-Dundalk road, 38 miles south of Belfast, turned out to be a hooded dummy packed with 100 pounds of explosives.

NDP race not for me —Barrett

COQUITLAM (CP) — Premier Barrett said Thursday he is not a candidate for the New Democratic Party's national leadership.

He said at a news conference he is "personally regretful" the NDP's acting federal leader, Ed Broadbent, has declined to seek the leadership at a party convention to be held this summer.

Barrett called Broadbent a "fine parliamentarian," adding that he understands Broadbent's decision not to run.

In comment on the statement by Vancouver-Burrard NDP MLA Rosemary Brown that she has been asked by a number of supporters to run for the national leadership, Barrett said, "If Ms. Brown were to run she would certainly be a favorite daughter from B.C."

Trudeau aide expects 'help' cry for Olympics

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday that Quebec has not requested additional federal aid for the 1976 Montreal Olympics, but there were other indications such a request is expected. (See also Page 12).

"They'd be damn fools if they didn't make a request," said one ministerial aide. "If you've got something going that's going to benefit all Canadians, you'd be a fool not to."

Trudeau's remark in the Commons came about the same time as Victor Goldbloom, Quebec municipal minister, said in Quebec City Ottawa must reconsider its refusal to grant special assistance to the Games.

A spokesman for Trudeau said Goldbloom's remark seemed to be a personal opinion. If Quebec wanted to request more aid, "they'll send us a letter."

Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa said Wednesday it is almost certain the special $1 million lottery will be extended in Quebec province to help cover the deficit.

Is it a Sasquatch or a real threat?

● Western grievances within Confederation are real, and western discontent is obvious. But could such things lead to Western separatism? Colonist reporter Bill Lever, following numerous interviews in B.C. and Alberta, has examined the issue.

First of five parts

By Bill Lever, Colonist reporter

Western Canada might not have any martyrs willing to die on the barricades for the cause of separatism, but it does have more and more people getting more and more fed up with being a colonial hinterland of the industrial east.

And continuing a tradition of dissatisfaction that began as back further than Riel rebellions, westerners of varied political stripes continue to speak of the ultimate possibility of seceding from Canada.

How seriously is such talk to be taken? Is there really the possibility of a strong movement for western independence?

As one westerner, an old-time Edmonton newspaperman, puts it: "Western separatism is like that Sasquatch of yours in B.C. It's big and hairy and threatening, and from time to time people say they see it. But does it really exist?"

The same question was being asked in Quebec about 15 years ago, a fact undoubtedly on the mind of Prime Minister Trudeau last summer when he stated that western Canada alienation had become a more serious problem for national unity than French Canada has ever been.

Whether he cares enough to do anything about it is another question. Meanwhile the old western economic grievances such as tariffs and freight rates — plus a few new ones like resource taxation — continue to frustrate westerners who sense that something is badly out of whack in Canadian Confederation.

And the westerners are speaking up.

Ged Baldwin, veteran Alberta member of Parliament with a reputation for moderate views, says he sees "more potential now for dissolution of the bonds of nationhood in the western provinces" than ever before anywhere in the country.

"The situation is like that of a tinder dry forest which needs only someone to strike a match to cause a conflagration."

And in his first-ever flirt with separatism, Baldwin recently made the crucial point that "the economy of the west is viable and could sustain an independent state with ease. This is very obvious to westerners and more are openly saying so."

Dr. Hugh Horner, deputy premier of Alberta: "How far can you push people? Separa-tism might not be a serious threat now, but certainly the potential is there."

Richard Baxter, chairman of Manitoba Export Corporation: "Emotionally, I don't want to get out of Canada, but economically you have a strong argument for getting out. And if some strong leader could be found to support the idea, it could be sold because it is so right."

John Barr, Edmonton oil company official and former adviser to the Alberta government: "The west today is in a condition of latent political rebellion. The idea of separatism is no longer unthinkable, and if the federal government remains insensitive to the aspirations of the west, it will be providing more ammunition for the separatists."

Ernest Watkins, retired Calgary lawyer and author: "Western Canada is neglected and ignored . . . It could be a viable independent state, at once becoming a Pacific Rim country and turning its back on the east."

John Rudolph, president of the Independent Alberta Association: "Western Canadians are dissatisfied with our virtual colonial status within Confederation. The federal government acts to provide very substantial economic advantages to an already favored eastern Canada, primarily at the expense of the western provinces.

"We wish to have our position improved by negotiation, but because history . . . makes us skeptical . . . we are reluctantly forced to consider independence for Alberta or western Canada.

Gary Lauk, B.C. trade minister; "British Columbians might not be separatists, and they are not isolationists. But they sure as hell are alienated."

Allan McKinnon, Victoria MP: "I still think we're loyal to Canada . . . but central Canada seems so deaf to our pleading for a fair deal that they're going to have to face threats of retaliation."

The issue has made allies of the most unlikely combinations of westerners. The west's only non-NDP premier, Peter Lougheed of Alberta, is clearly united with his New Democratic counterparts on the dispute over resource taxation and on the basic grievance of favoritism for the east at the expense of the western resource economy.

And in Ottawa recently at a finance ministers' conference, Premier Barrett was even quoting the Colonist's right-wing columnist Gorde Hunter, who was writing that the time has come for the west to go it alone.

That column, incidentally, led to the discovery of an apparently large body of separatist thought among Greater Victoria residents — within days it its publication, Hunter received letters and phone calls from 179 readers, all but three expressing support for the drastic action he advocated.

If there is not yet a serious movement toward separatism, there is clearly unrest and a growing sense of frustration.

Most westerners don't need to be told what the fuss is all about. The west was, after all, settled by the eastern provinces, for the benefit of the eastern provinces. It's a classic example of what political scientists call the metropolis-hinterland relationship, and the outnumbered residents of the west have a lengthy catalogue of grievances:

On the prairies, the traditional problem has been wheat, and many farmers have gone broke on some of the richest lands in the world. Farmers everywhere have their complaints, but who can blame the prairie grain growers when the Trudeau government's position has been that farmers who can't meet international competition should simply get out of business?

"There's hardly one bloody industry in Canada that could stand up to that rule," Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney has said. "If you were to apply that principle to, say, the textile industry, the first thing you would do would be to close every textile plant in the country."

Complaints about federal wheat politicies are old and varied, but among the most recent is the bitterness toward the so-called experts who insisted western farmers be taken out of wheat production in 1970. In the meantime the demand has risen sharply and the farmers have been sitting with no reserves to sell.

The Canadian tariff system, economists have estimated, costs each family in the country about $700 a year. That is the difference between a typical range of products here and the U.S., and doesn't even take into account products from the Orient. From the western viewpoint, that is part of the price we pay to protect the manufacturing industries located almost exclusively in the east.

The resource and agriculture industries, the basis of the western economy, receive no such protection. On the contrary, the western products — petroleum, minerals, foodstuffs — stand naked to the blast of world competition and in some cases must be sold even below world prices to residents of the east.

The petroleum industry is of vital importance to the west, particularly Alberta, yet as long as eastern Canada could get slightly cheaper oil by importing it from Venezuela or the Middle East, the federal government refused to open this market to western Canada oil.

With the arrival of the so-called energy crisis came another series of federal demands on western purse-strings. From the oil industry's viewpoint, the export tax, the national one-price system and the price freeze all amount to an enormous subsidy of the east.

The latest confrontation, which Premier Lougheed has called the biggest ripoff in the history of Confederation, has the federal government taking away the provinces' right to collect royalties from resource industries. The federal government, of course, maintains that the resources should be taxed to benefit all Canadians — but to many westerners this latest move is just another example of the "colonial" west being penalized by the populous east.

● Among the most irksome examples of federal partiality toward the east is the oft-discussed issue of discriminatory freight rates. Despite promises by the Trudeau government to end the inequities, the only change to date has been the recent increase of the rates.

Westerners pay the freight on whatever they bring in or ship out of the region; not only does this place an extra burden on the consumer, it serves to inhibit the development of western secondary industry.

The list of grievances can be expanded indefinitely. Because of its population — which translates into political clout — the east has remained overwhelming dominant in virtually all phases of Canadian life. The banks are controlled in the east, the communications-entertainment industry remains centralized in Ontario, the civil service and parliament itself are firmly in the grip of the two large eastern provinces.

Western separatism, such as it is, is so far a negative sentiment, a reaction against colonialism and economic discrimination. Westerners are fond of saying they're Canadians first and residents of their province second — but this statement is more often than not the prelude to a discourse on the inequalities of Confederation.

CLEANING OUT THE DRAWER . . .

I must confess a recent column of mine ran away with top honors in the mistakes-of-the-year contest, when no less than 13 spelling mistakes showed up. Now I am not the world's best speller, but I can at least handle words like, mother, thrift, Eaton's, etc. — which just happened to be a few that ended up badly mangled. The only charitable way to look at it is to suggest an inordinate number of gremlins infiltrated the typesetting machine that particular day. And I must clear up any misunderstanding as a result of yet another typo that found its way into this Wednesday's column. It came out in the paper — ". . . the proliferation of socialist-style governments in Western Canada — different, but so far, nothing to 'substitute' any bogey fears of any of the 'isms' so widely forecast."

It should have read, ". . . nothing to substantiate any bogey fears of any of the 'isms' so widely forecast."

It seems that the old spelling problems can crop up in places other than newspapers. A drive-in restaurant was doing some public service advertising for a local high school event. The sign read, to be held in Oak Bay "Jim." Then there is a local drug store with a sign advertising "perscriptions." We're all guilty. . .

□

MAYBE you missed the story — I didn't. Said that a survey by the Canadian Federation of Independent Business showed that a majority of its members favor giving cash-paying customers a discount.

They polled about 4,500 independent businessmen and it came out 68.4 per cent in favor, 26.5 per cent against and 5.1 per cent sitting on the fence. It pointed out that many of the major credit cards, Chargex and Master Charge, for instance, require participating merchants to pay between 2 and 5 per cent of the purchase price as a handling charge. The contracts with the merchants forbid them to offer discounts for cash sales.

But not so long ago, in The United States, the Consumers' Union won an out-of-court settlement that forced American Express to allow cash discounts, and the decision whether to offer the discounts is now left to the individual merchant. A giant step forward.

Federation president John Bulloch says supporters of the discount proposal in Canada have argued that cash customers are subsidizing those who buy on credit. They just don't argue this, they know it to be damned well true and Chargex and Master Charge can't deny the allegation. Hopefully this discount for cash move will gain new followers every day . . .

AT HAND an acceptance by Premier David Barrett to appear at this year's Sportsmen's Dinner March 10 at The Empress. Will mark the first time a premier of this province will appear at the big event . . .

WASHINGTON Governor Dan Evans doesn't want oil tankers plying the waters of Juan de Fuca Strait. Premier Barrett doesn't want them. Liberal leader David Anderson, the original fighter against the tankers, obviously still doesn't want them. Nobody seems to want them in those waters so when will the senior governments of both Canada and the United States comply with the expressed wishes and remove the fear by banning the tankers? I'm afraid, after a couple of serious mishaps . . .

MY DAY wouldn't be complete without at least one item on ICBC. Last year a lady found that she had been charged $18 more for her insurance coverage than she had been the previous year (for the same coverage) by an independent firm.

She requested and received a rebate. Now she has received her new insurance form for 1975 and finds she is once again back up to the $18 figure. One difference, however. This year she will not be able to claim any rebate. In other words, they'll get you sooner or later . . .

MANY phone calls to this department asking where copies of the petition asking for the return of capital punishment, can be had. Sorry, I do not have the address of the lady in Vancouver, who is spearheading the drive, however, there is an alternative.

John Reynolds, PC member for Burnaby-Richmond-Delta, has been handling queries on the petition and a letter to him at the Parliament Buildings in Ottawa will bring a reply to a petition. The aim is to get one million signatures and then present them to the government. That would be a pretty good expression of discontent with the present permissive approach to murder one, but I'm still not sure it would be enough to sway the abolitionists who hold the upper hand in cabinet. I still think a massive protest by the police departments throughout Canada would be the most telling approach . . .

"We are undertaking to move toward the publishing of a weekly news magazine for Canadians as soon as practicable,," he said. "The transformation will be done in stages. It will not be a new magazine appearing overnight."

Stephen LaRue, president of Time Canada Ltd., said Thursday the move "would, in effect, cause us to cease publishing in Canada."

The Canadian edition of Reader's Digest, and its French-language counterpart Selections, have already begun selling shares on the Canadian market. Faulkner said it is "very possible" this process would continue until the magazine became eligible for the status of a Canadian publication.

Canadian magazine are defined by tax law as being at least 75-per-cent Canadian-owned and significantly different in content from a U.S. associate.

Ottawa has "put us in a very awkward position," vice-president David Mintz of Bellingham TV station KVOS said Thursday of the second blow the Channel 12 station has received this week.

Mintz said the federal decision would force Channel 12 to cut ad rates back by as much as 50 per cent "so our advertising is competitive."

He said that would "hurt the little advertisers" and indicated it could cause a cutback of the Channel 12 staff in Vancouver, which ranges from 60 to 100, depending upon business flow.

"We have been incorporated in Canada since 1955 and we have been taxed in Canada since then on any business we do in Canada and we have reinvested our profits in Canada."

Mintz said Channel 12 could not compete with CBC and CTV on Canadian content but went into film production heavily through the subsidiary Canawest Film Productions Ltd. of Vancouver.

"We have employed more talent, cameramen, technicians, animators, than any English-language station outside of Toronto or Montreal."

Broadcast sources said the tax-deduction reversal had been expected for some time and had been the subject of many briefs to Ottawa by KVOS and other border stations which do a total of about $20 million worth of Canadian business annually.

What must hurt KVOS the most, said one source, is that Ottawa's announcement came less than a week after an Ontario appeal court ruling on a key cable-TV issue said signals of U.S. TV stations were public property once they got into the air, and the stations had no right of ownership.

That ruling was part of a judgment upholding the right of the Canadian Radio-TV Commission to order deletion of commercials on U.S. stations, whether paid for by Canadian or U.S. advertisers.

Faulkner said he knew there had been talks on "Canadianization" between Time magazine and Canadian publishers but declined to offer any details because "this is private."

Faulkner said also "the objectives of the amendment are not anti-American, not at all, but they are pro-Canadian. There are many Canadians who are preoccupied by the American influence . . . it is not a bad influence, but it is a foreign one."

He said the amendment would end the diversion of Canadian advertising money to foreign publications. "I am confident the enterprise and skill of the Canadian magazine industry will seize this opportunity. It is my hope and expectation that this decision of the government will result in the creation of a Canadian newsmagazine," he said.

In 1973, Time and Reader's Digest accumulated 14.2 per cent of the advertising revenue of all Canadian periodicals. Time circulation was 557,713, largest of any newsmagazine in the country, and Reader's Digest sold 1,330,678 copies.

Time magazine, which print an occasional Canadian cover and adds five or six pages of Canadian content at the start of an otherwise-standard American edition, made some $16.2 million in Canadian advertising revenue in 1974.

Faulkner, who received the support of opposition parties, said "in taking these steps we in the government are really not so much concerned with certain of the nation's industries as we are deeply committed to the nation's integrity."

Time's LaRue said that "we believe the result of the proposed amendment would be against the wishes of our more than 500,000 Canadian subscribers and newsstand buyers and numerous Canadian advertisers.

It also would be detrimental rather than supportive, to the Canadian magazine industry, he said.

For the last several months, LaRue said, Time Canada has been negotiating the sale of 75 per cent of the ownership of the company to Canadian interests.

"It is our hope the government will allow the company to be Canadian-owned and to continue to publish Time Canada."

The Digest spokesman, Canadian vice-president Ralph Hancox, said his magazine is not a news publication. He speculated the proposed legislation would be amended to permit the Digest's Canadian advertisers to continue deducting their fees from income tax.

Canucks back on track Scouts surprise Bruins

Vancouver Canucks snapped a lengthy losing streak Thursday but the most surprising result on an eight-game National Hockey League schedule happened in Boston.

Canucks ended a pointless run at nine games by edging the rookie Washington Capitals, 3-2, while the other expansion squad, the Kansas City Scouts, scored a 3-2 upset over the mightly Bruins at Boston Gardens.

Victory was only the 10th of the season for the Scouts, and it was the first win for former Bruin coach Bep Guidolin against his former team.

Bobby Orr got the Bruins away to a 1-0 lead before the Scouts struck for three straight goals and hung on for the win.

Randy Rota equalized for Kansas City in the first period and Ed Gilbert and Gary Croteau tallied in the middle 20 minutes.

Goalkeeper Dennis Herron stopped eight of nine shots in the final period, giving up a goal to Johnny Bucyk.

Defeat was costly for the Bruins who dropped nine points behind the surging Buffalo Sabres in the race for the Adams Division lead. Buffalo tripped the Detroit Red Wings, 5-1 in another game.

At Landover, Md.. the Caps hel da 2-1 lead until midway through the third period and had their losing string extended to nine games when Don Lever tipped in a Tracy Pratt shot with only 66 seconds to play.

Ab DeMarco had equalized for the Canucks earlier in the period, firing a 35-foot slapshot past goalkeeper Ron Low while Washington's Denis Dupere was serving a hooking penalty.

The hapless Caps, with only three wins and five ties in 47 starts, carried a 2-1 lead into the third period on goals by Mike Marson and Mike Bloom.

The win kept Vancouver three points up on Chicago Black Hawks in the Smythe Division race.

Chicago spotted New York Islanders the first goal of the game before firing three goals in six minutes and one second of the second period for a 3-1 victory.

Pit Martin sparked the Hawks by assisting on Phil Russell's goal then scoring the insurance marker after intercepting a pass in the New York zone.

At Buffalo, the Sabres scored three power-play goals in winning their 30th game of the season — a fifth in a row.

Rick Dudley scored the winning goal and assisted on another — the 20th and 20th assist of the season for the hard-nosed winger.

In other Thursday action, Reg Leach scored two goals to help Philadelphia Flyers to a 7-2 win over the Blues in St. Louis and New York Rangers kept pace with the defending Stanley Cup champions by trimming the Atlanta Flames, 5-2, in Madison Square Gardens.

Minor hockey talent on display at Arena

Skating room was at a premium Thursday when Victoria Minor Hockey Association celebrated Minor Hockey Night at Memorial Arena. Teams from pup to junior divisions took part in the nearly eight hours of exhibition games. Players are gathered here for the official opening ceremonies.

Kings, Canadiens post big shutouts

Los Angeles Kings and Montreal Canadiens took the shutout route to victories Thursday and maintained their neck-and-neck battle for first place in the National Hockey League's Norris Division.

With all-star goalkeeper Rogatien Vachon in the net, Los Angeles scored an 8-0 win over the visiting Toronto Maple Leafs while Ken Dryden recorded his second shutout of the season in a 7-0 Montreal win over the floundering Minnesota North Stars.

The results left Los Angeles one point up on Montreal and the Kings still enjoy a game in hand.

Vachon blocked 23 straight shots in posting his fourth shutout of the season — and second against Toronto — and he reduced his goal-against average to a league-leading 1.90 for 32 games.

The shutout was the seventh of the season for the goalkeeping tandem of Vachon and Gary Edwards, a Los Angeles club record.

Juha Widing fired three goals for the Kings, who held period leads of 1-0 and 4-0. Butch Goring, Neil Komadoski and Mike Corrigan each contributed a goal and two assists in leading the Kings to their eighth win in nine starts.

At Bloomington, Dryden stopped 27 shots and Glen Sather led the attack with a pair of goals.

The loss was Minnesota's 10th in a row and it left the North Stars only four points up on the rookie Kansas City Scouts.

Pete Mahovlich and Guy Lafleur added a goal and two assists each to the victory.

Esposito, Luce chasing records

Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins and Don Luce of Buffalo Sabres are closng in on a couple of National Hockey League scoring records.

Esposito, who leads the league in goals with 43 and points with 87, is six goals away from the power play record of 28 in a season, while Luce is two shy of the record of eight short-handed goals in one season.

The league leading goalscorer for the last six seasons, Esposito set the power-play record in the 1971-72 season when his total production was 66 goals. Hi sleague-leading 22 power-play goals this season is well ahead of runner-up Danny Grant of Detroit Red Wings, who has scored 13 of his 25 with the man advantage.

Luce, who is chasing the record set by Dave Keon of Toronto Maple Leafs in 1970-71, has scored more short-handed goals killing penalties than 11 of the NHL teams, while the Sabres lead the league with 11 goals in 194 penalty-killing attempts.

Broken arm sidelines Red

SAN JUAN, P.R. (AP) — Dan Driessen of Cincinnati Reds has suffered a broken arm while playing in a Puerto Rican winter league baseball game. The injury will sideline the young third baseman-first baseman for at least eight weeks.

The accident occurred when Gary Carter of Philadelphia Phillies, also playing winter ball here, collided with Driessen at first base.

The hard-working goalkeeper posted his first-ever Western Canada Hockey League shutout in backstopping the Cats to a 6-0 win over the Clubs in a game marked by the absence of certain players, and coaches from both teams.

Earlier in the day, league president Ed Chynoweth issued a stiffly-worded statement and suspended manager-coach Pat Ginnell of Victoria and coach Murray (Muzz) McPherson of Winnipeg for three games each. He also fined Ginnell $1,000.

Chynoweth said Ginnell showed little or no control over his players from becoming involved in a huge brawl with the Clubs on Monday in Winnipeg. He said the fine was a result of a similar incident in Brandon the following night.

If the fine is not paid by 5 p.m. on Jan. 28 Chynoweth said, the Kamloops Chiefs-Victoria game scheduled for that night at Memorial Arena will be cancelled.

McPherson was suspended for lack of control over his players in the Monday fight which resulted in six game misconduct penalties.

The league also suspended Cougar-captain Kim Clackson for six games, three for starting a fight in Winnipeg and three for what Chynoweth said was an unprovoked attack on a Brandon player immediately following a Wheat King goal.

Jerry Rollins of Winnipeg was also suspended for three games for his part in the Monday fight and Eric Sanderson of Victoria was suspended indefinitely for receiving a match penalty in the Brandon game.

In addition, Darryl Sutton of Winnipeg and Lori Gloeckner of Victoria were suspended for one game because they left the bench to join in a fight.

But that wasn't all the bad news for Victoria.

Only two hours before game time, it was learned that flashy young defenceman Gordie Roberts will be lost to the team for up to six weeks with a badly-broken thumb. Roberts picked up the injury in the Monday scuffle but played a full shift in Brandon.

The loss of Roberts, Gloeckner and Clackson left Victoria with only two regular defencemen — Rick LaPointe and Tim Williams and Rick Peter, who has seen more duty at left wing this season than on the blueline.

The defensive trio turned in a standout game in helping preserve Leslie's shutout. Williams had a pair of goals while LaPointe and Peter drew an assist each.

Leslie made 36 stops, including 17 in the second period when the Clubs mounted their best attack.

Cougars finish their six-game road trip in Brandon tonight and return home to face Calgary Centennials on Saturday at Memorial Arena.

In other Thursday action, rookie Dan Bonar scored two goals to give the Wheat Kings a 2-1 victory over the visiting New Westminster Bruins, while Don Murdoch ran his league-leading goals total to 54 by scoring three times in a 6-3 Medicine Hat win over Kamloops.

Stags become Blades, move to Baltimore

From Sharks to Stags to Blades.

The World Hockey Association made it official Thursday, announcing that the Michigan Stags franchise had folded and would be replaced by Baltimore Blades for the remainder of the season.

Originally housed in Los Angeles, where as the Sharks they averaged more than 5000 fans in their first two seasons, the franchise was moved to Michigan prior to the start of the season.

But at Detroit's Cobo Arena they averaged around 2000 fans and when the management couldn't meet the December payroll, the league took over the franchise, and is still seeking private owners.

Baltimore Mayor William Shaefer whose administration had been trying to obtain a franchise for more than a year welcomed the Blades to the city Thursday saying the move "puts Baltimore in the company of other major-league cities in North American Hockey."

With the Blades moving in the Baltimore Clippers of the American Hockey League are folding, effective immediately.

Clippers owner Zanvyl Krieger said that since the beginning of the WHA three years ago the team had averaged about 4000 fans per game at the 10,000 seat Civic Centre and had sustained substantial losses.

The Blades will play four road games before opening at Baltimore against Houston Aeros on Feb. 2.

Because of the troubles at Michigan the Stags were forced to cancel five home games which will be made up by the Blades in March.

In league games Thursday: Blair MacDonald scored three goals and Jacques Plante made 34 saves as the Edmonton Oilers thumped visiting Winnipeg Jets, 7-3; Indianapolis Racers scored their 10th victory of the season defeating Chicago Cougars, 4-2, at Indianapolis; Cleveland Crusaders snapped Quebec Nordiques win streak at 10 games by defeating them, 5-2, at Quebec City; San Diego Mariners whipped visiting Vancouver Blazers, 6-1.

Courtenay merchants try to solve parking problem

COURTENAY — The need for improved parking in the downtown core and greater emphasis on promoting the business area, were among items discussed Wednesday af the meeting of the Downtown Merchants Association.

The 36 merchants attending a luncheon meeting, will also approach council with a suggestion that two merchants be named to the Advisory Planning Commission.

When advised that planning commission members are appointed by the mayor at the inaugural meeting of council in January, Boyd Lafferty, Association president, said he thought, "they would take two more."

However, Mayor William Moore, who was not invited to the meeting, said Thursday he does not appoint special intermember of the APC.

"If ther are people who have something to contribute to the planning of the whole city and not just the down town area I would be pleased to entertain the idea," he said. He also noted that at least one retail merchant, Al Rae, is already serving as a member of the AAPC.

Neil Woodrow, named chairman of a committee to study an overall parking plan, told the group the city was hard to pin down in regard to parking matters. "They want us (the merchants) to come to them with ideas," he said.

Assisting Woodrow in the study are Al Evans, Blaine Douglas and Richard Graham.

Inno Schaefer, who will head the promotion committee, said co-operation is the key to our survival. "We are in the twilight and unless we co-operate and sell the downtown area as a shopping centre, we will not survive."

He suggested a monthly promotion gimmick and also favoured extensive promotion of the Forbidden Pleateau ski area because "business has to be created, we can't sit here waiting for it to come to us."

Boyd Lafferty, president, urged merchants to advertise as a group rather than individuals. "Our strength lies in unity and a strong and united front is needed if we are going to compete with shopping centres."

Several speakers suggested the "serious" downtown parking problem could be alleviated if merchants and their employees did not park in the downtown core.

Lafferty wants the group to suggest less expensive land which could be provided for such parking.

He said the deadline for signing a land-use contract by officials of Dominion Construction for their proposed development on Ryan Road had elapsed and council had notified him that it was unable to say whether or not the company will return with another contract at a later date.

The meeting unanimously endorsed a motion that a letter be sent to the city expressing strong oppositon to any shopping centre development on the outskirts of the city or areas adjacent to the boundaries, and recommended that any future development be confined to the downtown area.

Resource management regions, Nanaimo centre for one of seven

Resources Minister Robert Williams announced the realignment of resource management boundaries Thursday.

Williams said the new boundaries would remove one of the major barriers in the way of wise resource management by making it easier for the managers of various resource branches to communicate.

"Efficient resource management had been shackled with a spaghetti plate of boundaries which differ for each agency, and which have evolved separately over the years," Williams said. "Co-ordinated boundaries should be a major step in achieving co-ordinated land use and environmental decisions."

The new resource management areas will be progressively implemented by each of the resource departments directed by the Environment and Land Use Committee.

Development of the co-ordinated boundaries for all resource departments was authorized by ELUC as a result of recommendations from the select standing committee on forestry and fisheries.

"A fundamental finding of this committee was that there is inadequate communication among the various resource agencies charged with resource management," Williams said. "To cope with that difficulty, consolidated district boundaries and the location of district staffs of all management agencies in the same centre were recommended."

Williams said the establishment of all resource staff in the various designated centres awould take place over a period of time. The seven resource management centre will be Nanaimo for all of Vancouver Island; Greater Vancouver for the Lower Mainland; Kamloops for the Thompson-Okanagan; Nelson for the Kootenay; Williams Lake for the Cariboo; Prince George for Omineca-Peace River, and Smithers for the Skeena.

Trustees to meet Feb. 4

THETIS ISLAND — Local representatives who serve on the island Trust, responsible for the 13 Gulf Islands, will have their first offical meeting with the three appointed committee members of this new government body Feb. 4 in Victoria.

Mrs. C. H. Pardee and Mrs. Joesphine Ateah, who won the Nov. 17 election, are among the 26 representatives elected to serve on the Island Trust.

Each of the 13 designated Gulf Islands is represented by two local trustees under the provisions of the Island Trust Act, which came into force Jan. 1.

The two Thetis Island women will meet with Mrs. Hillary Brown of Hornby Island, chairman of the Trust; Marc Holmes of Salt Spring Island, vice-chairman, and David Brousson of Bowen Island, the third member of the committee.

Among the topics expected to be on the agenda will be the development of a community plan for the Islands.

Although this will be the first official meeting of the whole group, an organizational meeting attended by all local trustees from the 13 islands was held in Parksville early in December.

The Thetis Island trustee, Mrs. Ateah, said she didn't expect there will be many meetings of all the members of the trust. She said that most meetings would be between the local trustees and the general trustees and they will be held on the islands involved in the discussions.

Mrs. Mary Hewington receiving citizen of the year trophy from Norman Nehajwich, president of Duncan Kinsmen Club.

Cowichan Valley picks nurse as its top citizen

DUNCAN — A woman well known by many mothers in the Cowichan Valley was chosen citizen of the year this week.

Mrs. Mary Newington, head nurse of the maternity ward at the Cowichan District Hospital, was honored at the 10th annual citizen of the year presentation held by the Kinsmen Club of Duncan.

Three judges, Rev. Alan Kerr of St. Johns Anglican Church, Don Kerr, of the Postal Workers Union, and Norm Nejhajwich, Kinsmen Club president, chose her from the names submitted by area residents.

Mrs. Newington, who was highly praised by the medical staff at the hospital, "has gone beyond the normal call of duty many times in her role as a nurse."

Many young mothers, who had no place to go after they had given birth, would testify to "the trouble Mrs. Newington went to arrange alternative housing and care for them."

She is also involved with the local Family Planning Association, and has helped organize pre-natal classes for expectant mothers.

Mrs. Newington also assists with the Red Cross blood clinic, and canvasses for the Red Cross and United Appeal.

She is also the past matron of the Eastern Star and past guardian of Job's Daughters.

Regional board head raps 'after the fact' park plan

By JOHN HENDERSON
Colonist Correspondent

PORT ALBERNI — Port Alberni alderman, George McKnight, elected earlier this week as chairman of the Alberni-Clayoquot Region Board, reacted with anger to the "after the fact' 'plans for development of Pacific Rim National Park announced Wednesday by representatives of the national parks board at a public meeting in Ucluelet.

"It's just another example of the high-handed fashion in which the senior level of government has consistently bypassed the regional authority in making plans that affect entire communities in the area," he said.

"We were not even advised of the meeting. I only learned of it at the last minute."

McKnight said Wednesday he would attend the second public meeting on the same subject, held in Tofino Thursday.

He said he would make his objections and the feelings of the regional board known.

He said he would also read a telegram sent Wednesday to the federal parks branch in Calgary, asking that no tenders be let for the sewage system in the parks, announced as part of the proposed development in the park, and which were called in Calgary with a deadline of 3 p.m. Wednesday.

McKnight said the regional board wanted to know whether the plans for the sewage system have taken local needs into account. "And whether they should not take a look into the sewage needs for the whole area, including the parks, before putting in a separate system for the parks.

McKnight pointed out that the serious lack of communication between the national parks department and the regional board is a long-standing problem.

"Instead of treating the regional board as a legally constituted level of government, the senior government seems to regard it as something akin to a ratepayers association or a chamber of commerce," McKnight said.

Port Alberni mayor Howard McLean, agreed with McKnight that more integrated planning is necessary. "The federal government seems to make these plans without too much regard for their impact on the communities involved, he said.

Ucluelet, Tofino asking for financial assistance

UCLUELET — Residents of Ucluelet and nearby Tofino want government assistance to help pay for facilities in the Long Beach section of Pacific Rim National Park.

The request was made here Wednesday at a public meeting, called to discuss this year's development plans for the park. A similar meeting was held in Tofino Thursday night.

The federal parks branch announced plans to spend a total of $2.8 million on the whole of Pacific Rim Park. This includes the Broken Islands and the life-saving trail between Bamfield and Port Renfrew.

Of this sum, $1.7 million will be on land acquisition within the park at Long Beach and the Broken Islands. Another $1.1 million will be used for improving and upgrading the park facilities at Long Beach.

Despite the expenditures for park development, aldermen and mayors of the two communities claim the senior governments are not helping to provide services for half a million people who visit the area every year.

Ken Gibson, deputy Mayor of Tofino, said the village faces a severe water problem and added "why should we pay to improve our water services for people who come to visit the park?"

Ucluelet Mayor Bob Russell said the residents are loggers or fishermen.

"We haven't the funds to pay the expenses for sewage and garbage disposal for the all are people who come here."

Bill Blakely, Alberni Regional District Planner, suggested a specijl committee be set up to work with the governments on this matter.

Jack Holyroyd, parks superintendent, said the parks branch does not have the authority to spend money outside the park.

"But there are other government agencies which can do this," he said, adding that Tofino and Ucluelet should approach the provincial government for financial assistance.

There was some opposition at Wednesday's meeting to the closure, possibly within a year, of the beach for camping.

"I like seclusion," said one resident. "I like to camp on the beach alone. Why can't I do this?"

Senior Planner Peter Matrosovs of Calgary, said if one person is allowed, everyone must be allowed.

"How are you going to be able to enjoy solitude if there are 10,000 other campers beside you?" he asked.

School strike

Talks start again

NANAIMO — Contract negotiations resumed Thursday in an effort to end the labor dispute which has closed the district's 43 public schools since Tuesday.

The schools were shut after locked-out members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees refused permission to teachers to cross their picket lines.

Thursday's resumption of bargaining was initiated by the school board, and union spokesman Nick Mieras said Wednesday schools could reopen by Monday if the talks were fruitful.

The school district's 175 non-teaching employees conducted rotating strikes since the beginning of January, forcing classroom instruction to be cut back most days to one hour.

More than 12,500 students are affected by the strike.

Winter Festival starts in Duncan

DUNCAN — The three-week long B.C. Winter Festival which was proclaimed Thursday by Premier David Barrett will be underway officially in the Cowichan Valley tonight, with a visit by the Victoria Symphony Orchestra.

The Cowichan Valley Regional arts council, with 600 members, is sponsoring the festival here, and hopes to see it represent all the visual and performing arts available in the valley.

In addition to the many events, there will be displays in the Duncan Mall and other halls in the area.

Local photographer Robert James has organized a show of photographs by amateurs and professionals.

There will also be poetry readings, and an evening of original local music written and performed by the residents of the valley.

Other features will include a demonstration of weaving by the Cowichan Bay weavers, pottery crafts and ethnic dancing.

During the festival, Victoria's Bastion Theatre group will be putting on the comedy — Butley.

Information on the festival events can be obtained by phoning 748-3101.

Cedar youth surrenders

NANAIMO — Robert David Paul, 17, of Cedar, who escaped from the New Haven Institute in Burnaby Wednesday night, gave himself up to Nanaimo RCMP Thursday.

Paul was serving a one-year sentence after he was found guilty of criminal negligence causing death. The charge was laid after Linda Twarog, 18, of Nanaimo, was killed in a car accident on Wakesiah Avenue on her way home from school last June. Paul had served about four months of his sentence.

Suspended inspector 'in conflict'

NANAIMO—Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals inspector Derek Roberts has been suspended from his position here on grounds of conflict of interest.

The suspension took place Wednesday after Roberts filed a bid at city hall to operate pound services for the city. His bid, however, is in competition to one filed by the society.

Roberts has bid $172,000 for a two-year contract. The society entered a bid of $82,000 per year over two years.

Neither Roberts or SPCA president Larry Hume were available for comment.

Plaza construction to begin March 1

By BILL SMITH
Colonist Correspondent

COURTENAY — Two large boxes containing "all documents dealing with two shopping centre developments in the city" were sent to Victoria recently, Mayor William Moore told council.

The exhibits were requested by Robert Prittie, inspector of municipalities, following charges by a group here alleging irregularities in connection with the shopping centre developments.

Moore said it took city hall staff several days to put together the documents at a cost to the taxpayer of $1,500.

The group ot concerned citizens originally had charged conflict of interest, but in a telegram to Prittie on Jan. 7 the group's spokesman, downtown merchant Inno Schaefer, asked that all charges of conflict of interest be withdrawn from the inquiry they were seeking.

In a letter to Prittie which accompanies the documents, city administrator Derrick Ratcliffe, states that council is very upset with the allegations, especially in regard to the conflict of interest charges.

The administrator goes on to say that Ald. Robert McPhee disclosed to council that he held one or more shares in Moray Holdings Ltd. and ehat the company was at that time owners of the land on which the Commerce Capital Properites Ltd. shopping centre was to be constructed.

Ratcliffe said the alderman declared his interest in the land at the time the initial approach was made by the developer and from that time on he abstained from voting on the issue.

Dealing with the alleged involvement in the issue of Gordon Blackhall, chairman of the city's advisory planning commission. Ratcliffe said no recommendation to council was ever made by the ARC on the matter of the location or otherwise of shopping centres in the city.

Blackhall is a member of the staff of Nanaimo Realty, the company involved in both the shopping centre which had been proposed for Ryan Road and the Commerce Capital Development at the southern entrance to the city.

Commerce Capital officials have signed a land-use contract with the city for the planned $5.2 million centre. Construction will start March 1, with completion set for March, 1975.

The second centre, which Dominion Construction was to build, appears to have fallen by the wayside, as the company did not meet a Dec. 31 deadline set by council for presentation of plans and signing of a land use contract.

At Monday night's meeting, council repealed the land-use contract bylaw which Dominion had failed to sign.

Another development in the protracted shopping centre hassle came this week in the form of a copy of a letter sent by Richard Von Fuchs of Courtenay, earlier this month to the inspector of municipalities.

The letter asks for an inquiry into shoppong centre development on the grounds that "the municipality is supposed to engage in planning, yet they did not consult any of the staff of five planners available at the Comox - Strathcona Board office.

"No professionals were involved, and the result completely contradicts a plan for the future growth of Courtenay which the city paid for a few years ago."

Von Fuchs also states that residents of neighboring areas were not consulted about their opinion of the increase in commercial traffic through their residential area — particularly on Fitzgerald Ave.

He also claims council ignored opposition to the shopping centre which was voiced at a public hearing in December.

Expansion bid draws criticism

COURTENAY — Proposed expansion of the Courtenay Recreation Association building in Lewis Park, has drawn sharp reaction from the Comox District Society for Pollution and Environmental Control Branch.

The group, at a meeting this week, discussed the proposal and the possible further encroachment of parkland that would result, and it was decided to alert council of the group's concern to the proposal.

Another weekly

A chain of suburban weekly newspapers in Greater Victoria is expanding again — this time to the Colwood-Langford area.

Publisher Dan Heffernan, who in recent months has launched the Oak Bay Star, Saanich Courier and Esquimalt Sun, will bring out the first issue of The Langford-to-Colwood Telegram next Wednesday. Like its sister publications, The Telegram will be distributed free.

Alcoholics' treatment hinges on refinancing

The future of a $2.75 million private alcoholic treatment centre in North Saanich is in doubt, after the general contractor on the project filed a petition asking the centre's holding company be placed in receivership.

Farmer Construction Ltd. filed the petition in B.C. Supreme Court last fall but accepted a postponement of proceedings until Monday in the hope that the Gillain Foundation could refinance the scheme.

But Wayne Farmer, general manager of Farmer Construction, which holds about $1.2 million in liens against Gillain Manor, said that although he hopes the refinancing attempt is successful, "I'm not too optimistic."

George Strachan, president of the foundation, said Wednesday the centre probably won't be placed in receivership and complained that tight mortgage markets combined with increasing construction costs have resulted in the current financial problems.

"Like everyone else, we're caught in the squeeze," he said, adding that the foundation has applied to Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. for a new mortgage on the centre, which now is estimated to cost about $1 million more than initial projections.

If CMHC turns down the application, Strachan said he would approach private mortgage companies and possibly seek new investors in an attempt to bail out the project.

However, Farmer said that Strachan hasn't been able to come up with the needed capital yet.

The building is 75-per-cent complete, and was to have opened in the fall.

Gillain Manor was to have provided treatment for alcoholics who are employed — people Strachan said have been ignored by present alcoholic treatment centres, which he said offer a service primarily to "skid road" alcoholics.

About 80 per cent of all alcoholics have steady jobs and are at least in middle-income brackets, he said.

The centre would offer treatment at about $50 a day and would accommodate about 80 patients and their families for treatment periods of about 28 days.

Farmer said that as general contractor, Farmer Construction is responsible for paying sub-trades, and that the contract with Gillain Foundation was for about $1.5 million, of which about $1.2 million remains outstanding.

Esquimalt Buccaneers can't seem to beat Victoria Nixons, but they manage to keep them from gaining ground in the South Island Junior "B" Hockey League.

Buccaneers maintained their league lead at five points Thursday by playing to a 5-5 draw with second-place Nixons at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

The teams have met five times this season. Esquimalt won the first encounter, 4-3, Victoria took the second, 6-4, but the next two games ended deadlocks.

Their final encounter of the season is Sunday at 6 p.m. at Memorial Arena.

Buccaneers led, 3-1, after two periods Thursday, but Nixons came back to take a 5-4 lead and Esquimalt needed a goal by John Bechtold at 18:44 of the third period to gain the tie.

Bechtold, Dave Lale, Paul McDonald and Mark Bowles scored the other Esquimalt goals, while Brian Matvenko (2), Grant Pert, Rob Wilson and Geordie Robertson scored for Victoria.

Probe warranted in spite of denial

ST. LOUIS (AP)—A federal drug investigator said Thursday that a full-scale investigation is warranted despite a refusal by Roxie Ann Rice to corroborate a story that she was a courier of drugs for professional football and basketball players.

Thomas Maher, administrator of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration in St. Louis, said the DEA considered Miss Rice's story "authentic" and her account to police warrants "a full-scale investigation".

The 19-year-old St. Louis girl has denied that she ever told police of a cross-country caper to carry drugs to various athletes on the advice of Major Charles Wren, assistant chief of detectives.

"In the absence of an attorney, I felt I must take a protective role in her case," Maj. Wren said. "I do not want her to be exploited.

He also said she refused to take a lie detector test or to talk to any one of several persons in the National Football League who remember some of the incidents related in a 39-page intra-departmental police memo.

Maj. Wren has also refused to confirm that such a memo exists, saying only that he is investigating news reports.

Miss Rice was arrested Jan. 4 on charges of defrauding an innkeeper and frauduulently using a credit card, believed to be stolen from Ken Houston, a defensive back for Washington Redskins. She is still in jail.

The reports, leaked to the news media Tuesday, were based on Miss Rice's statement made during a six-hour session with St. Louis police and agents of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration.

The memo quoted Miss Rice as saying she was recruited to transport briefcases containing what she believed were narcotics to players in many NFL cities.

The memo said Miss Rice posed as Dr. Andiza Juzang of Ghana and dealt with players on the Redskins, Houston Oilers, St. Louis Cardianls, San Diego Chargers, Detroit Lions, Kansas City Chiefs and Cincinnati Bengals football teams.

She said she was recruited by a woman she now believes lives in Miami, the memo said.

Traffic toll rising

The traffic death toll in Greater Victoria from Sooke to Sidney, which reached a new high of 49 last year, has climbed to five in the first 22 days of 1975.

Latest victim was Galiano Island resident Mrs. Georgia Head, 62, who died shortly after midnight Tuesday in Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Sidney RCMP said she suffered head injuries Saturday night when hit by a car as she crossed the Patricia Bay Highway near Beacon during a visit to friends in the Sidney area.

District coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre has set an inquest for 7 p.m. today at Sands' in Victoria.

The traffic fatality was the first of the year in Sidney and followed one in each of Victoria, Esquimalt, Oak Bay and Colwood since the start of 1975.

Province asks more gun care

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald said Wednesday the provincial government has no plans for new gun legislation this spring. Macdonald said he has asked gun merchants in the province to exercise greater caution with their stock and tighten security of rooms where guns are stored overnight.

Canadians earn medals in N.Z.

CHRISTCHURCH, N.Z. — Canadians earned two gold and two silver medals Thursday during opening day action in the New Zealand Games.

John Beers of Merritt cleared seven feet, one and a half inches to capture the high jump while little Becky Smith of Edmonton topped a fine field in the 200-metre individual medley in swimming competition. Her time of 2:23.23 beat the mark set by Leslie Cliff of Vancouver when she won the same event at the Commonwealth Games here last year.

Earning silver medals were Brenda Eisler of Burnaby with a long jump leap of 20 feet 6½ inches; and Maureen Crowley of Vancouver in the 800-metre track final.

Penalty: Community work

By BRUCE LOWTHER
Colonist Reporter

One of the B.C. government's many programs to improve the provincial justice system will became visible for the first time Monday when a 27-year-old Victoria man goes to work in a Victoria community service organization.

Wayne Beaumont, 1324 Johnson, pleaded guilty Jan. 10 in the Victoria Provincial Court section of Judge Harold Alder to an Oak Bay charge of theft of two $10 folding lawn chairs Sept. 2 from an apartment balcony at 2707 Estevan.

Thursday, Alder put Beaumont on probation for six months and then became the first judge in Greater Victoria to add a condition that grew out of the Administration of Justice Act passed by the B.C. Legislature last May.

Alder ordered Beaumont to complete 40 hours of community service work as directed by Edward Stanton, the probation officer for the three adult sections in the court building at 633 Fisgard.

Stanton and community service supervisor Don Peterson said Beaumont, who works from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays as a painter, will do 2½ hours duty on each of four nights a week starting Monday running the front counter at the Victoria Boys' Club.

His 40 hours thus will be completed in four weeks. During the rest of his probation, his obligations will be reduced to obeying the law and reporting to the probation officer when required.

Community service and supervision make up only one of many programs the B.C. attorney-general's department is slowly putting into effect in hopes of improving justice. A few others are local justice councils, bail hostels, diversion groups and numerous changes in the jail system.

The service and diversion programs have become visible to the public first because their workers attend Judge William Ostler's main court section daily in furthering the basic program goals of giving judges new alternatives in bail and sentencing.

First to appear was Aberdeenshire native Stanton, 61, who has been a probation officer for 26 years in Scotland and B.C., coming to Victoria in 1968. Probation officers did court work in other buildings until he was named in mid-October as the first such officer on the adult court staff.

Before year-end, he was followed by Bernie Jordens, 34, and Linda Kreger, 27, from the five-member staff of the Community Diversion Centre at 508 Alpha, opened Oct. 1 on funds provided by the B.C. corrections service.

This month, they have been joined by community service supervisor Don Peterson, 41, whose job means less court time for him than the others. A native of Saskatchewan, he recently ended a 22-year RCMP career and was well known for police work in Colwood.

Since he joined Dec. 10, Peterson has been lining up community service jobs and has a chart on his office wall in the Masonic Temple at Fisgard and Douglas which lists scores of duties for sentenced persons — all unpaid, of course.

A few examples are knitting and sewing at the Red Cross, helping blind wheelchair patients at Mount St. Mary's office duties at Meals on Wheels, camp work for the Boy Scouts and cleanup work for several volunteer fire departments.

Once a judge sentences a person to community service, Stanton and Peterson pick the project. Peterson is to supervise all cases and with draw from any program a person who is not following all the rules. Stanton then could charge the person with breach of probation.

There are dozens of other aspects to the new court duties of probation officers but they all aim, as a government statement put it, at making an offender's relationship with the court "a more complete learning experience while satisfying legal requirements."

One change made by Ostler since Stanton took his new duties is a requirement that persons released on bail report frequently to Stanton instead of the old practice of reporting to police.

It is the areas of release on bail pending plea, trial or sentence that the diversion program comes into play. Jordens and Ms. Kreger work with Stanton in providing homes, jobs, counselling and other facilities for the accused.

They are well trained for the work. Ms. Kreger, born in New Hampshire, has master's degree in rehabilitation counselling and came to Victoria late in 1973. Jordens, a native of Manitoba, has spent most of his life here and has a master's in theology.

Stanton said many of the basics were worked out last spring at a B.C. Corrections Association seminar on alternatives in sentencing and are based "partly on English experience."

Community service will have a maximum of 100 hours to be completed within eight weeks. The accused persons must be willing to do the work and persons such as chronic drunkards will be excluded.

Stanton said the first known probation occurred 300 years ago in Boston when two men whose crime was not reported were ordered to work for a blacksmith — unpaid, of course.

Pelletier dims B.C.'s TV-10 hopes

OTTAWA (CP) — Communications Minister Gerard Pelletier said Thursday the federal cabinet is not likely to go along with the B.C. government's request that a very high frequency (VHF) channel be set aside for educational television in southwestern B.C.

"One must realize that this request doesn't square with the long-established government policy that educational television should go on UHF and that VHF stations are kept for general broadcasting," Pelletier said.

He said any exceptions to the policy have been transitional and the Canadian Radio-Television Commission is authorized only to give ultra high frequency (UHF) stations for provincial use.

Pelletier said he expected the cabinet decision on Channel 10, the last remaining VHF channel in the area, in two or three weeks. Ron Fraser, assistant to CBC president Laurent Picard, said Thursday that negotiations to purchase a $500,000 strip of land on Blanshard between Hillside and Kings owned by the city of Victoria are dependant upon the CRTC awarding the government network Channel 10.

Fraser said the CBC plans for Victoria included both radio and television stations but the exact details of the project, to cost about $6 million, have not been decided.

He said the CBC's application to the CRTC, expected to be made in mid-February, will include plans for more than 10 hours of Victoria-produced programming for local, Vancouver Island and national consumption.

Meanwhile in Victoria, B.C. Communications Minister Robert Strachan said Pelletier's statement on the provincial request for Channel 10 tends to "make it more difficult for the province to develop a more adequate educational TV system."

If the CRTC does not award the channel to the CBC, Fraser said, a channel on a UHF broadcast band could be a possibility but that band lacks the strength to serve all of Vancouver Island.

He said Ontario met with additional expense when it went into UHF educational TV rather than the VHF system envisaged by B.C.

Strachan said he believed B.C. will be able to present a "very strong case" with the federal authorities on its submission for Channel 10.

Tax changes hit Channel 12

Time likely out, Digest may stay

Colonist Wire Services

OTTAWA — Tax amendments announced Thursday by State Secretary Hugh Faulkner will force Time magazine and Reader's Digest to close down operations here or become Canadian periodicals within a year.

Faulkner told the House of Commons the Income Tax Act will be amended to remove a special provision which permits Time and Reader's Digest, alone among foreign magazines, to share with Canadian publications a tax deductibility provision on advertising.

With the amendment, Time and Reader's Digest will be stripped of a special tax provision which allows advertisers to deduct the cost from their income tax.

Time indicated it would quit, the Digest is pushing "Canadianization" of its operations and Maclean's expressed its intention to fill the weekly newsmagazine gap.

Faulkner also told the Commons the Tax Act will be amended so sponsors can no longer deduct from income tax the cost of advertising in U.S. border stations, such as Bellingham's KVOS, which beam their broadcasts to Canada.

He estimated $20 million in advertising revenue goes to such U.S. stations each year.

KVOS said the tax changes put it in "a very awkward position" but it planned to stay in business.

Time and Reader's Digest have both maintained their Canadian editions could not compete and would have to be withdrawn if the special tax privileges were taken away.

Speaking outside the Commons, Faulkner admitted Time might close its Canadian operations but added "they have a year, until Jan. 1, 1976, to make decisions on that issue."

Meanwhile, a spokesman for Maclean-Hunter Ltd. said Maclean's magazine, now a monthly, will become a weekly newsmagazine to replace Time if it ceases publication in Canada.

Maclean's editor Peter Newman praised the amendments to the Income Tax Act as "a shot in the arm" for Canadian publishing.

Sudden oil drop security threat to U.S.—Simon

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Treasury Secretary William Simon told Congress that any sudden interruption of more than one million barrels a day in the United States oil supply would "clearly threaten to impair our national security."

Simon, in a Jan. 14 memorandum to Congress made public Thursday, said that "a recurrence of the 2.4-million barrel-a-day reduction which occurred during the 1973 OPEC embargo would have a prompt substantial impact on our economic well-being and, considering the close relation between this nation's economic welfare and our national security, would clearly threaten to impair our national security."

In an interview earlier this month, State Secretary Henry Kissinger said — and President Ford subsequently confirmed — that any oil-related action which threatened to "strangle" the United States might result in the use of force against foreign oil producers.

Simon added that "in the event of a worldwide political or military crisis, it is not improbable that a more complete interruption of the flow of imported petroleum would occur." "In that event, the total U.S. production of about 11 million barrels a day might well be insufficient to supply adequately a wartime economy," he said.

Hostage holder charged

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Donald Wayne Cline, a 22-year-old escaped convict, was charged Thursday with armed robbery following a bizarre sequence of events in which he held police at bay and four young children hostage in their home near here.

Police said other charges are pending against Cline, who was arrested at a London residence early Thursday after a zig-zagging police chase interspered with gunfire through a wide area of southwestern Ontario.

The armed robbery charge was laid in Woodstock, Ont., where Cline is being held without bail until he appears in court today.

The drama started Tuesday afternoon when provincial police, alerted that four men had held up a food store in nearby Thamesford, set out on a search of area homes where the robbers might have taken refuge.

Arriving at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Field, two officers were confronted by a gunman who disarmed them but did not detain them. Police said three other armed men also had burst into the home but left before they arrived.

The remaining gunman allowed Mrs. Field to leave the farmhouse but kept four of her young children inside while he bargained with police for $10,000 in ransom and a getaway car.

IRA offers to renew Ulster, U.K. truce

BELFAST (UPI) — The outlawed Irish Republican Army has decided to renew its ceasefire in Britain and Northern Ireland, a source said Thursday.

The disclosure came hours after a bomb believed set by the IRA shattered the lobby and restaurant of the 12-story Europa Hotel, the city's largest and a local landmark. No one was hurt.

Meanwhile, a suspected IRA bomb badly damaged a north London pumping station Thursday night in the first bombing incident in Britain in a month.

Scotland Yard said four persons, two of them men working in the station, were taken to a hospital suffering from shock.

The explosion blew out the door and windows and smashed a hole in the roof of the two-story building and broke water pipes inside. Police sealed off a side road because of flooding.

The ruling army council of the outlawed guerrilla organization reached its ceasefire decision Wednesday night, the source said, and will issue orders within the next 48 hours to its members to stop all violence.

A formal announcement was not expected until early next week.

There was no confirmation from Dublin, where the seven-man council has been in secret session all week, but IRA sources there said a meeting Wednesday between British officials and representatives of Sinn Fein, the IRA's political wing, was a hopeful sign.

The IRA's provisional wing declared an 11-day break in all "military" activities in Northern Ireland and Britain Dec. 22 and then extended the truce to Jan. 16.

But it refused to prolong the ceasefire a second time and accused the British and Irish governments of failing to cooperate in the drive to end the strife that has claimed 1,147 lives here in the past 5½ years.

A British Army spokesman said the suspected victim of an IRA assassination found Wednesday beside a stolen car on the Newry-Dundalk road, 38 miles south of Belfast, turned out to be a hooded dummy packed with 100 pounds of explosives.

NDP race not for me —Barrett

COQUITLAM (CP) — Premier Barrett said Thursday he is not a candidate for the New Democratic Party's national leadership.

He said at a news conference he is "personally regretful" the NDP's acting federal leader, Ed Broadbent, has declined to seek the leadership at a party convention to be held this summer.

Barrett called Broadbent a "fine parliamentarian," adding that he understands Broadbent's decision not to run.

In comment on the statement by Vancouver-Burrard NDP MLA Rosemary Brown that she has been asked by a number of supporters to run for the national leadership, Barrett said, "If Ms. Brown were to run she would certainly be a favorite daughter from B.C."

Trudeau aide expects 'help' cry for Olympics

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday that Quebec has not requested additional federal aid for the 1976 Montreal Olympics, but there were other indications such a request is expected. (See also Page 12).

"They'd be damn fools if they didn't make a request," said one ministerial aide. "If you've got something going that's going to benefit all Canadians, you'd be a fool not to."

Trudeau's remark in the Commons came about the same time as Victor Goldbloom, Quebec municipal minister, said in Quebec City Ottawa must reconsider its refusal to grant special assistance to the Games.

A spokesman for Trudeau said Goldbloom's remark seemed to be a personal opinion. If Quebec wanted to request more aid, "they'll send us a letter."

Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa said Wednesday it is almost certain the special $1 million lottery will be extended in Quebec province to help cover the deficit.

● Western grievances within Confederation are real, and western discontent is obvious. But could such things lead to Western separatism? Colonist reporter Bill Lever, following numerous interviews in B.C. and Alberta, has examined the issue.

Is it a Sasquatch or a real threat?

First of five parts

By Bill Lever, Colonist reporter

Western Canada might not have any martyrs willing to die on the barricades for the cause of separatism, but it does have more and more people getting more and more fed up with being a colonial hinterland of the industrial east.

And continuing a tradition of dissatisfaction that began back further than Riel rebellions, westerners of varied political stripes continue to speak of the ultimate possibility of seceding from Canada.

How seriously is such talk to be taken? Is there really the possibility of a strong movement for western independence?

As one westerner, an old-time Edmonton newspaperman, puts it: "Western separatism is like that Sasquatch of yours in B.C. It's big and hairy and threatening, and from time to time people say they see it. But does it really exist?"

The same question was being asked in Quebec about 15 years ago, a fact undoubtedly on the mind of Prime Minister Trudeau last summer when he stated that western Canada alienation had become a more serious problem for national unity than French Canada has ever been.

Whether he cares enough to do anything about it is another question. Meanwhile the old western economic grievances such as tariffs and freight rates — plus a few new ones like resource taxation — continue to frustrate westerners who sense that something is badly out of whack in Canadian Confederation.

And the westerners are speaking up.

Ged Baldwin, veteran Alberta member of Parliament with a reputation for moderate views, says he sees "more potential now for dissolution of the bonds of nationhood in the western provinces" than ever before anywhere in the country.

"The situation is like that of a tinder dry forest, which needs only someone to strike a match to cause a conflagration."

And in his first-ever flirt with separatism, Baldwin recently made the crucial point that "the economy of the west is viable and could sustain an independent state with ease. This is very obvious to westerners and more are openly saying so."

Dr. Hugh Horner, deputy premier of Alberta: "How far can you push people? Separa-

Mother Cecilia loses $1.5 million lawsuit

The B.C. Supreme Court Thursday dismissed a suit for a $1.5 million property by Mother Cecilia Mary Dodd and four sisters and declared that the five plaintiffs are no longer members of the Roman Catholic Society of the Love of Jesus.

Mother Cecilia and the four sisters, who operate the Good Shepherd Animal Shelter at Mill Bay, sued the society for a declaration that they are the only lawful members of the society and as such are entitled to exclusive use of St. Mary's Priory in Colwood.

Mr. Justice Harry McKay, in a 38-page judgment handed down in Vancouver, said each of the five plaintiffs had been dismissed earlier by the Society of the Love of Jesus as a religious in the Roman Catholic Church.

"One must be a religious in the Roman Catholic Church to be a member of the defendant secular society," said the judgment. "It follows that when one is properly dismissed as a religious she ceases to be a member of that secular society."

The lawsuit followed dissention in the society over the activities of Mother Cecilia, 86, in creating and operating an animal shelter as part of the work of the order.

The society countered with a supreme court claim that the five plaintiffs were no longer members of the society. Mr. Justice McKay heard the case in a month-long trial in Victoria.

The society has substantial assets including valuable land which the supreme court judge ordered the five sisters to vacate by April 30, 1975.

The judge says the church never intended to ignore the needs of the five women.

"Canon law provides that the reasonable needs of a dismissed religious are to be taken care of and the rescripts in question specifically so provide," he says.

The judgment said Mother Cecilia founded the order in Vancouver in 1922 as an Anglican institution. In 1937, all but two members of the order became converted to the Roman Catholic Church. Of the 1937 converts, only Mother Cecilia survives.

The order later moved to Victoria and acquired land and created a chapel, a residence for the sisters and a hospital. Later a senior citizens' home was established.

Eventually the building was converted to the sole use as a priory for the religious order and was called St. Mary's Priory.

"It is obvious that the Sisters of the Society of the Love of Jesus, under the direction of Mother Cecilia, had done a remarkable job in a comparatively short period of time," said Mr. Justice McKay.

He said Mother Cecilia had for some years become a law unto herself and had found it difficult to comply with the lawful orders of her superiors in the church hierarchy. He added that Mother Cecilia had attracted a remarkable degree of loyalty from the sisters under her.

She became prioress, but later another prioress was elected who informed Mother Cecilia she would have to get rid of her three dogs.

"The fat was in the fire," said the supreme court judge. "Mother Cecilia said that if her dogs had to go she would go."

Later, she went with her dogs to a three-acre property she owned in her own right. Earlier, while she was still prioress, she had set up an animal shelter on that property.

Her personal ownership of property was one of the many matters that she and the Roman Catholic Church disagreed on — the church taking the position that it was not in keeping with her vow of poverty.

Her work at the Good Shepherd Shelter has expanded over the years and it is a well-known haven for abandoned animals of all species. As zoning laws caught up with her, Mother Cecilia moved to Mill Bay.

"The work has received mixed reactions from the public and has proved to be somewhat of an embarrassment to the Roman Catholic Church as it is associated in the public's mind with the work," said the supreme court judge.

Quick action contains small spill

Small 50-gallon oil spill about noon Thursday in Esquimalt Harbor was corralled inside 1,100-foot oil-boom within 30 minutes and harbor waters were cleared by late afternoon. Spill happened during transfer of bunker fuel from Canadian Coast Guard's weathership Quadra, right, into large oil barge when a valve jammed.

Mediator files report

CUPE talks Sunday to decide on walkout

City of Victoria outside workers, now in a legal position to strike, will decide Sunday when to call a walkout that could paralyze regional municipal services and Greater Victoria schools.

Ron Davidson, an executive member of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, Local 50, said Thursday the executive will meet Sunday to discuss the timing of a strike by the 280 workers. Local 50 now can withdraw its services at any time as it has received a copy of mediator Clark Gilmour's report.

Gilmour was asked to withdraw from the dispute Wednesday and filed his report with Labor Minister William King the same day.

The Regional Bargaining Group (RGB), representing the Greater Victoria School Board, the Capital Region District, Sidney, Saanich, Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Victoria in talks with seven CUPE locals, has said it will meet any individual strike by a general lockout of all 1,783 CUPE workers in the region.

Tom Smith, a CUPE representative, said Thursday the RBG has indicated it would ask Gilmour to withdraw immediately from the other disputes if one local strikes, putting the municipalities and the school board in a legal position to lock-out all its CUPE workers.

However, Smith said he hopes that if that happens, King will use his power under the B.C. Labor Code and refuse to accept Gilmour's report, forcing both sides to continue bargaining.

There is a possibility of reaching agreements in several areas if the municipalities bargain in good faith, Smith said, but the "employers now seem more interested in locking people out."

Meanwhile, a meeting Thursday between the Capital Region District and 110 inside and outside workers was inconclusive, Dennis Young, the region's executive director, said Thursday.

Although another meeting date has not been set, Young said the two sides are no further apart, while warning that the "good relationship is likely to deteriorate" if there is a strike by city outside employees.

Mediation efforts will continue next week from four other CUPE locals; the school board and its janitors and custodians will meet at 10 a.m. today.

A prolonged strike by municipal employees would save Victoria taxpayers "millions of dollars," Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen said Thursday.

A strike would also give the population added "maturity," the mayor said in an interview.

"For a change, not everything would be done for them. They would have to rely more on their own initiative," Pollen added.

He stressed, however, these advantages weren't worth the price that would have to be paid in the form of "the disintegration of our usually excellent staff-management relationship."

"As you know, we have a very competent and good staff," Pollen said.

But if a strike does occur, he said, the city might as well look at it from the bright side.

"The money we save could easily pay for the Government Street mall," the mayor said.

School stand in 36 hours

Greater Victoria residents will know Saturday afternoon if schools will be shut down in the event of a general lockout of CUPE workers in the area.

Greater Victoria Teachers' Association and CUPE representatives will meet Saturday morning to discuss whether teachers will continue to work in the event of a lockout of regional CUPE members, including janitors, school aides and secretaries employed by the Greater Victoria School Board.

Mavis DeGirolamo, president of the teachers' association, said Thursday that a special meeting of teachers Wednesday unanimously approved a contingency plan for a lockout situation. However, she said, she could not release details until after Saturday's meeting.

She did say teachers would not perform work usually done by CUPE members and would encourage students to follow suit.

If janitors and custodians are locked out, and schools are without heat and garbage removal, the regional medical health officer should keep a close watch on health conditions in the affected schools, she said, taking "appropriate measures" where necessary.

Municipalities ponder:

How to do impossible?

As Greater Victoria edges closer to a possible strike by municipal employees, civic governments are preparing themselves for an almost-impossible task.

How to keep the wheels of municipal government's complicated machinery going in the event of a strike? That's the question on the minds of a handful of non-union senior staff members and elected officials.

At Victoria city hall, there were already grim signs Thursday morning indicating a strike may be unavoidable.

The entire assessment department, transferred last October from the city to the provincial government's Assessment Authority, was preparing to evacuate the building.

Chief assessor Jack Ozard and his staff of 12 aren't involved in the dispute between several locals of the Canadian Union of Public Employees and seven municipal government agencies.

Ozard said his department is ready to move to the assessment authority's headquarters at 1537 Hillside to avoid being caught in a strike.

Government business

If the expected strike occurs, government business will be severely affected in Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay, Esquimalt, the Capital Region District, Sidney and the Greater Victoria school district.

In Victoria, the work normally carried out by more than 500 employees would fall on 35 senior personnel.

Every facet of city business would be affected.

The streets would no longer be cleaned and municipal garbage pick-up would cease.

The city's recreation facilities, such as the Crystal Pool and Royal Athletic Park would be closed.

Johnson Street Bridge would have to be closed to traffic, or be operated by a senior staff member.

Rezoning applications, requests for business licences and applications for building permits would start piling up, and the granting of such licences and applications would have to be done on a priority basis.

All projects carried out by city engineering crews would come to a complete halt.

Council meetings would continue to be held, but the agenda would be light because most city operations would virtually cease.

Water bills could no longer be paid at city hall. Developers, trying to push through projects that involve zoning matters, would have to be even more patient than at present.

All municipalities have contingency plans, but they refuse to give details at this time.

Emergency services

These plans include emergency services, such as repair of water main breaks.

They also include detailed instructions to residents regarding garbage disposal.

Municipalities are expected to announce garbage dropoff points where the refuse would either mount, or be picked up by non-union senior staff members.

Municipalities would also probably ask residents to cut the grass on boulevards in front of their homes.

Other parks maintenance, including the cutting of lawns, pruning of trees and planting of flowers would be reduced to virtually nothing.

The Capital Region would be similarly affected by a strike. The Juan de Fuca Recreation centre would have to be closed.

The processing of building permits for the unorganized areas would come to a crawl.

The Hartland Road garbage dump would probably be picketed, closing the area's major disposal site.

Regional senior staff would have their hands full providing minimum service at sewage disposal facilities, such as the Macaulay Point outfall.

Lum won't elaborate

Saanich mayor Ed Lum would not elaborate on his municipality's plans for operating in the event of a strike. He said those plans will be announced if and when they are needed.

Spokesmen at Saanich municipal hall are not expecting to need their emergency plans until after Jan. 31, when a meeting is scheduled with mediator Clark Gilmour.

About 375 employees would be affected and Saanich, like Victoria would be left with only about 35 senior personnel to do everything from answering phones to repairing water mains.

Planner Tom Loney said Thursday he and assistant planner Gil Laurenson would have their department all to themselves during a strike. Unlike the city, professional planners in Saanich are unionized.

The already-slow processing of rezoning applications would be reduced to a trickle and developers who have projects under construction probably would not be able to secure necessary inspections and permits.

Loney fears some smaller builders might find themselves in serious financial trouble as a result.

Spokesmen for Oak Bay and Esquimalt municipalities refused to comment on how their municipalities would be affected.

Peter Cairns, Esquimalt municipal-treasurer, refused to say whether any alternate plan has been arranged to supply needed services that may be cut off.

A spokesman for Oak Bay also refused comment.

However, the spokesman said: "There are plans made for handling all these things."

The only union members on North Saanich municipal staff are the five public works department employees.

Work contracted out

A municipal official said most work in North Saanich is contracted out and about the only effect a lockout would have on the municipality is that minor road repairs would not be done, and some drainage ditches would not be cleared.

In Sidney, a total of 17 workers are union members and lockout would hit fairly hard. However, none of the officials would forecast what results such an event would have on the town.

UVic pays $12,400 to buy off censure

With a payment of $12,400 into a teacher's fund, the University of Victoria is expected to get out from under a censure placed on it four years ago.

UVic's new president, Howard Petch, and Canadian Association of University Teachers president Richard Spencer made a joint announcement Thursday of a proposed settlement of a dispute which arose when the contracts of three professors were not renewed.

The money is to be placed in a special trust fund to be established by CAUT "to assist those individuals whose academic careers may have been damaged" during controversy at the University in 1970-71.

S. J. Cunliffe, chairman of the university board of governors, said the action is being taken simply to settle the dispute. It in no way acknowledges any fault.

He hopes the action will contribute to a better feeling among faculty staff and students and enable the UVic Faculty Association to increase its membership and play a more effective role at the university.

The Canadian Association-imposed censure was designed to warn prospective faculty that there was no assurance of academic freedom at a particular university, but a university spokesman said the censure had not prevented UVic getting high calibre faculty.

Spencer welcomed the contribution and said he is prepared to recommend to the May meeting of the CAUT board and council that the censure be lifted.

The trust fund will be administered by CAUT which has agreed to make a payment of $2,600 to the fund.

The money is to be used to provide study leave support and other financial assistance to individuals who were affected.

'Acupuncture not panacea'

Acupuncture's use as an anesthetic during surgery is of limited value, even in China, where the technique was developed more than 5,000 years ago, the president of the Acupuncture Foundation of Canada said in Victoria Thursday.

Only about 20 per cent of patients respond well to acupuncture anesthesia and, even then, it may not offer complete freedom from pain during surgery, Dr. Elie Cass told members of the Men's Canadian Club of Victoria.

Although acupuncture results in less shock to the body than the usual anesthetic, Cass said that with the "great advances in western anesthesia," acupuncture for this purpose won't gain acceptance.

Even in China, he said, acupuncture is used only on selected patients.

The greatest beneficial use of the technique, he said, is for pain relief.

But he warned the technique is not a panacea for a wide range of medical problems and its use has best results in treating such "reversible" diseases as allergies.

Acupuncture is of no value in treating someone with cancer or a brain tumor, Cass said.

He contended that control of acupuncture must remain with the medical profession, otherwise death or disability could result.

He cited several examples of non-medical acupuncturists inserting needles in patients' hearts, causing death, and a similarly fatal case where a needle was stuck in the base of the patient's brain.

Because non-medical practitioners have no knowledge of anatomy and other subjects, and cannot perform diagnoses, a patient with a brain tumor could receive endless acupuncture treatments that relieve the pain but don't treat the tumor.

Cass said that although doctors don't know how acupuncture works, he doesn't feel uncomfortable using it because, he explained, many medical treatments, such as pain-relieving drugs and shock therapy for some mental patients, are not fully understood.

Gun-toting robbers hit city food store

Two men in their 20's armed with revolvers and with their faces covered by nylon stocking masks, robbed Wilson Foods Ltd., 47 Songhees, about 9:30 p.m. Thursday and got away with what police termed a large amount of money.

By 11 p.m. Saanich and Esquimalt Police had joined Victoria police in the search for the men.

Police weren't sure how the men got into the building or whether they escaped on foot or by car.

Esquimalt police said one man was held at gunpoint in the robbery.
